Mellon's Millions
She Kept the Ear
Easy to Get, Hard to Keep

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THE BOOK, "Mellon's Millions," is published, and Andrew W. Mellon, recently United States Secretary of the Treasury, should be grateful to the author and publisher for making him the hero of a fairy story that makes "Jack and the Beanstalk" or "Goldie Locks" and the bears seem prosaic. The book showers millions and billions on the Mellon family, with amazing generosity.

A little Mellon bank in Pittsburgh, lending out money, earns a BILLION DOLLARS before you can turn around; an oil venture brings in $743,000,000, and aluminum means more hundreds of millions.

The wonder is that Andrew, and the other Mellons, sons and nephews, continue working so hard if they really have two thousand million dollars, in spite of the depression.

The fairy godmother in "Mellon's Millions" gives the Mellon family not only billions in cash, but control of practically all the great corporations in America.

The Mellon family probably has, like the Rockefellers, Henry Ford and others, several hundred million dollars. You must have that amount to do business in a big way, just as a small garage man or grocer has to have some thousands to meet payrolls and bills.

Two portraits in the book every young American should see, the portraits of Andrew W. Mellon's father and mother, Americans of the old school.

In the face of Thomas Mellon, founder of the family, who, at nine years of age, with 99 cents in his pocket, walked 21 miles to Pittsburgh, determined to do something, you see a character that could not do anything but succeed. He died at the age of 95, with the respect of all that knew him.

Mr. Mellon's mother, wife of Judge Thomas Mellon, who was Sarah Jane Negley, is well described by her husband as "quiet, pleasant and self-possessed." A fine type of the intelligent American woman of the last century. The descendants of this couple were bound to do something.

It is hard to understand why Mr. Mellon should object to a book that makes him presents of billions, why he takes the trouble to say publicly that the book "alleges huge ownership in many corporations with which I have not had, and never have had, any connections or interest whatever."

Brooklyn, N. Y., usually a "city of churches and homes," is occasionally a city of fights. In one fight, Rudolph Nocella, aged 32, lost his left ear. He said a man bit off the ear in a "social club." The worst of it, according to Mr. Nocella, is "a large woman picked up the ear and announced, 'I am going to keep this for luck!' "

For a lady to keep "for luck" a left ear that does not belong to her seems strange. But millions of people for scores of centuries have made strange collections. Red Indians collected scalps. Head hunters collected and showed with great pride entire heads of enemies, even heads of those that had never harmed them.

And "civilized" gentlemen go to Africa to bring back heads of all sorts of animals, expecting to be applauded.

If you get money, even a little at a time, and keep it, resisting the temptation to try to get more, a great deal at a time, you may do well.

Pietro A. Lerardi, who stuck to his job, blacked boots, and did nothing but black boots, is dead. A surprised widow finds that he had cash in 11 banks, plus mortgages and real estate, worth $150,815.

Almost anybody can make

MACHADO OUT; CUBA POLICE HEAD SLAIN

President Resigns as Havana Celebrators Storm Palace

Havana, Aug. 12 (AP)—President Machado's regime collapsed today and its downfall was celebrated by the sacking of the presidential palace and the killing of at least five members of the dreaded Machado secret police.

Carlos Manuel De Cespedes, former ambassador to the United States, was named provisional president.

Gen. Alberto Herrera, secretary of war, was named secretary of state to serve with the understanding that then he would yield to the new president.

All communication with interior Cuba was cut off and the capital was ignorant of what was going on there.

Lomasney, Political Boss, Dies

Martin M. Lomasney, who rose from the humble position of a lamplighter to become one of the outstanding leaders of the Democratic party in Boston and Massachusetts, died this afternoon at his Hotel Bellevue suite.

Gathered around the bedside of the stricken Mahatma when the end came were half a dozen of his closest political friends.

These included William Prendible, clerk of Suffolk Superior County and a political protege of Lomasney, the leader's brother, Joseph Lomasney, and Representative John H. Higgins of the West End.

Four physicians, in almost constant attendance for the past forty-eight hours, were also in the room. These included Dr. Paul White, Dr. Cleveland Floyd, Dr. Edward F. Bland and Dr. Sylvester McGinn.

FIGHTS FOR LIFE

The death of Lomasney, who was in his 74th year, was due to an attack of bronchial pneumonia. A year ago the West End leader suffered from this malady and he never fully recovered. It left him in a weakened condition and he was unable to fight off the ravages of the disease, when again stricken several weeks ago.

It was shortly after 1 o'clock, when physicians, gathered about the bedside, became convinced that the end was near.

For 24 hours Lomasney had fought an uphill but losing fight, alternately sinking into a state of coma and then regaining consciousness.

Governor Ely, for many years one of Lomasney's closest friends was notified of the death at his home. Mayor Curley was notified at Cape Cod, where he is spending the week-end.

POLITICIANS AT HOTEL

Gathered in the lobby were many leading figures in the political life of the state, when death was announced.

Throughout the morning and early afternoon they had visited the hotel in large numbers, but only the most intimate friends were admitted to the Lomasney chambers.

Governor Ely sent his private secretary, DeWitt DeWolfe, to inquire as to the condition of the dying man.

The last rites of the Roman Catholic Church were administered almost 24 hours before death occurred.

STATE TO DIG UP BODY IN MYSTERY

Fighting Prosecutor Enters Inquiry Into Inventor's Death

Exhumation of the body loomed today as mystery deepened into the death and missing thousands of Charles S. Breslin, wealthy Salem inventor, who died at the Falmouth cottage of a Malden woman last June.

It came with the sudden entrance into the belated probe of Dist.-Atty. William C. Crossley, of Fall River, prosecutor of the recent McMath kidnaping and other mysteries of Cape Cod.

MISS HOWARD HIDES

Breslin died at a cottage that was leased to Miss Minna Howard, 38-year-old Malden stenographer, who was questioned once by police but today was in seclusion.

Shortly after the death, Mrs. Mary Breslin, widow of the dead man, reported to Chief John Harkins of the Salem police that she sought the whereabouts of two large sums of money—one of $42,000 and another of $25,000.

The death of Breslin was first reported as a drowning and later as the result of a heart attack. Dr. James P. Ryan of Salem, Breslin's family physician, said he had treated him for heart attacks but the withholding of a final report by Medical Examiner Curry of Falmouth opened a mystery into the death as well as the missing funds.

CASH IN CLOTHING

Dist.-Atty. Crossley admitted plans for an exhumation b[illegible] he intimated that he first planned to [illegible] police a chance to unearth some evidence of crime before he takes over the investigation.

Miss Howard, who makes her home in Commercial st., Malden, with her brother, John J. Howard, retired navy man, will be one of the first questioned as well as any others who were in the Falmouth cottage at [illegible] time of Breslin's death.

Under questioning of police, Miss Howard said she was unable to furnish any information other than that Breslin died from a heart attack as far as she knew.

Arthur Breslin, a Malden undertaker, brother of the dead man, claimed to reporters that the family knew nothing of any investigation into his brother's death.

"I just came from Salem where I talked with my sister-in-law (the dead man's widow) and she said she did not know of any investigation," was the Malden man's statement.

Helper Killed In B. & M. Yards

William James Snow, 28, of Gilman st., Somerville, employed as a helper in the Mystic yards of the Boston & Maine Railroad in Somerville, was crushed to death today when he was knocked from the roof of a box car.

Snow was standing on top of a stationary car when a line of cars were shunted down the track. He lost his balance when the cars came together.

Federal Bank Report To Come Next Week

Notice was served today on grand jury members to meet at the Federal building, Tuesday. A number of counterfeit, bankruptcy and liquor cases will be presented.

It was expected that the report of the probe of the closed Federal National Bank and affiliates would be ready but the checking up on several loans on mortgages may delay the matter.

"I Shall Ask Jury to Free Me on Evidence, Not as a Woman"

EXCLUSIVE!

By JESSIE COSTELLO

(As told to Ruth Mugglebee, Evening American reporter, through defense counsel)

(Copyright, 1933, by the Boston Evening American)

I want to have today and tomorrow to myself. I don't want to review the case legally any more. I don't want to know how they are going to plead my final argument to the jury. I want to think for myself on what I, Jessie Costello, will say to those 12 men when I go before them in my last opportunity to plead.

I want solitude over the week-end. And I am not going to think of anything else but my few words of final demand for freedom.

The jury, I feel confident, believed my story when I took the stand and I want to make them believe my last few words. I want to tell them in simple language how much I loved Bill and how much I love my children. I don't want to cajole them into sparing my life because I am a woman and a mother, but I do want them to hear me talk as I would if I were seated across from them over the teatable.

Widow Positive Jury to Grant Acquittal

I am not worried over the outcome. I am positive of acquittal. I am positive of speedy acquittal. The jury may have a jig saw puzzle before them to piece together in connection with Bill's death, but as far as I am concerned, I know they will believe I had nothing to do with it, however sudden and mysterious it was.

These past weeks have been so confusing to everybody, confusing even to me.

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Salem, Aug. 12 — "Beyond all reasonable doubt."

On that age-old maxim of the Common Law, Jessie Costello's lawyers today decided to base their final plea to the jury.

This is to be made by William G. Clarke, chief of defense counsel, but today his associates, Francis Rafter and William O'Brine, were working with him on a list of 74 requests for rulings which they will present to Judge Fosdick before he issues his instructions to the jury.

Clarke was at work in the courthouse despite the fact that he was running a fever of 102 degrees, attributed to the strain of the last four weeks in court and a slight cold. It was indicated that Rafter would take his place, should he be unable to appear in court on Monday.

Most of the requests, according to Rafter, will deal with the admissibility of circumstantial evidence, and the jury's right to reject expert medical testimony.

Mrs. Costello, meanwhile, put aside work on the plea that she is to make to the jury before it

OTHER LEADERS PICKED FOR CAMPAIGN

P. A. O'Connell Presides at Opening Session; Ely Absent

The Massachusetts Recovery Board held its initial meeting in the executive council chamber at the State House today and formally organized with election of Edward A. Filene, prominent Boston merchant, as permanent chairman.

John J. Power of Worcester was elected vice-chairman and E. Kent Swift of Whitinsville permanent secretary. Today's meeting was presided over by P. A. O'Connell, president of E. T. Slattery Co. Chairman Filene returns from Europe next Wednesday or Thursday.

Gov. Ely was not present to greet the President's appointees, all prominent industrial, business and educational leaders.

A program to put Massachusetts 100 per cent in line with President Roosevelt's national recovery program will be launched shortly by the committee.

SALARIES INCREASED

He told of increased salaries and enlargement of the working force, besides expenditure of huge sums in preparation for handling the expected big increase in business.

"I am not for N. R. A. 100 per cent, but 1000 per cent," he said. "I never was so optimistic for the future.

"R. H. White Co. has just completed a $1,000,000 improvement in its store and is now working on another $15,000,000 expenditure in order to cope with the anticipated increase in business.

"We are complying 100 per cent with the President's re-employment agreement and have voluntarily raised salaries of 54 per cent of the employes above the minimum wage basis.

"These increases were effective August 1 and constitute a general increase of 10 per cent.

"Now, for the future. After Sept. 15, 90 per cent of our personnel will be raised again. The number of employes in the non-selling divisions will be increased 80 per cent, and in the selling group, 77 per cent. Workroom employes are paid union wages.

"Our minimum wage is $15 rather than the $14 required by the code, on a 40-hour basis.

"We have had a 35 per cent increase in business due to an expected rise in prices and a new confidence among the general public."

NRA "SOLDIERS" ORGANIZE

Great success was reported today from Chelsea where the NRA campaigners have been organized on a military basis and are making a shop-to-shop and house-to-house canvass.

A Boston plumbing and heating contractor reported five contracts since the NRA drive started and he sent in his Blue Eagle code pledge with an enthusiastic letter.

From Washington came word that retailers who have complied with the re-employment agreement may purchase consumer emblems from printers who have received authority to reproduce such insignia.

Newburyport Tennis Courts for Children

Newburyport, Aug. 12—Public tennis courts have been provided for the children of the North and South End of the city, through the efforts of the Kiwanis Club, voluntary workers, Supt. of Parks Patrick Hartnett and City Councillor Patrick J. Welch.

Both courts are in fine condition and add much to the appearance of he playgrounds. They are the first of their kind here, and rules regulating the use of the courts will be drawn up to give every youngster an equal opportunity of trying their skill at the game.

Georgetown Shoe Vet Laid to Rest

Georgetown, Aug. 12—Last rites for Frederick G. MacKinnon 73, veteran shoe cutter who died after a year's illness were held in the family home 170 Central st. this afternoon with burial in Harmony cemetery. Rev. Charles Legal officiated.

Mr. McKinnon was a native of Newburyport and for a number of years had been employed as a shoe cutter in Haverhill factories. He leaves a brother William T. MacKinnon of Georgetown.

Mountaineers Fete First Lady With Old Tunes

White Top Mountain, Va., Aug 12 (AP)—Winding mountain roads that her father traveled when he was a timber company executive, traced a path today for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to White Top Mountain's summit for the third interstate folk music festival.

The mountain folk turned out for the First Lady. Bows were put to fiddles and feet were set to dancing as thousands made the winding trip to White Top.

Through the summer night, the giant pavilion swayed to feet that executed the square dance. The rising sun looked out upon the merrymakers who had promised to keep "a dancing" until the First Lady of the Land arrived.

"Cluck Old Hen," "Flop Eared Mule," "Black Eyed Susan," and "Granny Will Your Dog Bite?" were some of the age-old tunes drawn from the fiddle, banjo and dulcimer.

FOUR ARRESTED IN HI-JACKING

Even on vacation a policeman is a policeman, which accounts for the custody of four men at the state police barracks in Reading on charges of hi-jacking a wool truck in Newburyport turnpike a week ago last Thursday.

The aler policeman is Patrolman Albert S. McSweeney of the Billerica police, who claimed he overheard a conversation while on vacation that finally led to recovery of the wool at a Wilmington garage.

Thomas Riston, 36, owner of the garage in Main st., Wilmington, and Francis Shaw, 23, of Crown rd., Billerica, were placed under bonds of [illegible] for a hearing in Woburn district court next Tuesday, Riston charged with receiving stolen goods and Shaw with robbery while armed.

After a further investigation, John J. Rush of Harvard st., and William C. McLean of Monument st., both Charlestown, were arrested on charges of robbery while armed.

CONVICT HELD IN KIDNAPING

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 12—Police announced a man identifying himself as Anthony Sparka, alias Rena, of Hawthorne, N. J., admitted he was one of two men who kidnaped Fred Taub, a pawnbroker, in New York and demanded $10,000 ransom for his release.

Taub was found by police in a rooming house two hours after Sparka, an ex-convict, was arrested.

Police said Sparka and another man took Taub to the rooming house, forced him to remove his clothing and took from him $100 in cash and two watches.

Hearings Ended On Twenty Coal Codes

Washington, Aug. 12 (AP)—The recovery administration's hearings on upwards of twenty codes of fair competition for the bituminous coal industry came to a close at 12:45 p. m. today and Deputy Administrator Kenneth M. RIVER MYSTERY MAN FAILS, HAS $50

Willard Lists Perosnal Debts of $2,420; Car Is Sole Asset

Lawrence L. Willard of Natick whose 21-day disappearance last month is still under investigation by Dist.-Atty. Bishop, filed a bankruptcy petition in Federal Court today.

His only asset is the auto which was found submerged in the Charles river at Medfield on July 4, the day he disappeared. Willard values it at $50.

His liabilities are stated as $2420. Another bankruptcy petition was filed for the partnership of Willard and Edward T. Welling, known as the Willard Radio Co. of Natick, with assets, 2175, liabilities, $11,956.

Welling also filed a personal bankruptcy petition, listing assets as $3,550, liabilities, $4,200.

The finding of Willard's auto in the Charles river caused police to drag it for days. Later Willard turned up at Bridgewater claiming loss of memory.

Willard was questioned by Dist. Atty. Bishop last Wednesday and Bishop later said he was still unsatisfied and would continue the investigation.

ROOSEVELT AT FOREST CAMPS

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt left his special train carrying him from Hyde Park, N. Y., at 9:30 a. m. Eastern standard time, today and immediately boarded an automobile for a tour of the Shenandoah valley, en route to Washington.

A huge throng welcomed the chief executive, who smilingly waved a response to the applause and cheering.

The principal object of his visit to this section was to inspect some of the civilian conservation corps camps.

The motor caravan, immediately set out on the winding road for the first of three camps on the eastern side of the Blue Ridge range.

The President was accompanied by Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary, who handed him the latest reports from Washington on the Cuban situation.

3 DIE IN GUN BATTLE WITH SHERIFF

Officer Interrupts Fight and Shoots Men in Auto

Hanson City, Mo. Aug. 12 (AP)—Three men, said to be connected with night club operations, were shot and killed early today when Sheriff Thomas B. Bash discovered two of the trio exchanging shots with the third.

Two assailants, who were in a auto, were slain by Sheriff Bash and the third, who was afoot, died from wounds inflicted before the Sheriff interrupted them.

Fris J. Anthon, the man who was afoot; Sam Hogg and Gus Fasone, alias Sam Stine.

A third man in the motor car, occupied by Hogg and Fasone, was captured and another was reported to have escaped. The captured man gave his name as Charles Gargotta, 33, and denied he was in the killers' car.

Sheriff Bash, accompanied by Mrs. Bash, Miss Melva Taylor and Lawrence Hodges, a deputy sheriff, was driving home. He saw a man running and two men in a big sedan shooting at him. The runner returned the fire and fell.

Taking a riot gun, the sheriff fired as the men fired at him and his deputy. The two men in the car slumped, fatally wounded. Gargotta was taken, the sheriff said, when he ran across the street firing a revolver at the officers. Mrs. Anthon, who had been standing on the street, rushed to her husband. She told officers her husband was locking his motor car when someone started shooting at him.

FATHER TRIES TO BURN SON

A Malden father, believed to be mentally unbalanced, endeavored to burn his sleeping son to death, early today, according to Malden police.

The father, who was ordered removed to Danvers for observation, is Francisco LaFrancis, 55, of Swan st., Malden.

Philip LaFrancis, the son, 25, lives at 154 Beachview ave., Malden. He told the police that about daybreak he was awakened to find his room, including the bed-clothing, in flames. A quantity of kerosene had been thrown through the window over the bed and the son declared he had barely time to escape cremation.

Later, the father was arrested and taken into district court on the charge of arson. Judge Maurice R. Flynn ordered the man committed.

PROFITEERS TO SUFFER CODE PENALTIES

Unwarranted Price Boosts Will Get Full Publicity

Washington, Aug. 12 (INS)—An elaborate plan to protect consumers against extortionate prices, which will spread fan-like into every hamlet in the nation, was drawn today by the National Recovery Administration.

While the plan is expected to have its effect during the life of the President's re-employment agreements, it is designed particularly as a continuing enforcement measure when the permanent codes are signed.

The keystone of the plan is that two warnings will be given alleged profiteers. If the warnings are ignored full publicity will be given the findings of experts of the recovery administration in the localities of the alleged violators.

The first step will be placed before statistical experts of the consumers' advisory board and checked by other governmental agencies.

Complaints of profiteering which are pouring into the consumers' advisory board daily will be used in the checking-up process. The ultimate plan calls for a consumers' board in every county in the nation to serve as a clearing house.

Along with the campaign against profiteering the consumers' advisory board will undertake to educate consumers to the necessity of paying higher prices to enable employers to reduce hours of labor and increase wages.

Joining in the effort to persuade employers to sign codes and to ferret out violations, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor called upon 30,000 local trade unions to enlist in the campaign.

Spend an Extra Dollar, Make an Extra Job!

Success or failure of the NRA plan for the restoration of prosperity to America finally will rest with the people themselves. If the public buys, new jobs will be created and there will be more money, comfort and peace of mind for everybody.

If the public does not buy, the plan is certain to collapse. If the plan collapses, no one dare guess what will happen next.

"Buy Now" is now the crux of the whole movement.

Every American citizen naturally is enlisting under the NRA banner—one for all and all for one.

It is suggested that the President by proclamation designate September, when the code will be completely in effect, for a concerted buying movement on the part of the public. August is "Buy Now" month; let September be "Spend an Extra Dollar Month—Make an Extra Job."

Each purchaser would receive a button reading, "I'VE DONE MY PART." This would be as patriotic a decoration as the blue eagle of the employer, and the buttons we all wore so proudly during the Liberty Loan days.

With this movement fully in effect, the entire nation—worker, manufacturer, seller and buyer—would be enrolled under one banner—a prosperous, happy nation.

The Boston Evening American offers its full support and co-operation to the President in this new proposal, if it should merits its approval, and believes this newspaper's great family of readers will be found among the first to enroll.

Code Rates Nurses as Professional

Are you puzzled by provisions of the National Recovery Act code?

The N. R. A. Editor of the Boston Evening American will try to set you right.

Address your queries to him and the answer will be published here as soon as an official answer can be obtained.

There is only one condition: Please be brief.

This service is offered to readers of the Boston Evening American for their benefit and to help achieve the aims of the President in his national recovery program.

Today's "Q and A"

Q—Will you kindly state how N. R. A. code will apply to male nurses working in hospitals and also for charitable institutions where pay has been cut 7½ per cent or more and where hours are from 7:30 to 7?

A—Nurses are classed as professional and exempt from provisions of the code.

Q—I work in the warehouse of a chain store system. Under the code what hours should I work and what should I receive per hour?

A—Not more than 48 hours if employed by a grocery chain. Your pay should not be less than 40 cents an hour, unless the rate was less than 40 cents on July 15, 1929, but in no case less than 30 cents per hour.

Q—Does the new code apply to maids who work in a hospital, 8 hours a day, 7 days a week, at $13.44, or $1.82 a day?

A—Yes it does. You should get the minimum pay which may include meals.

Q—I am a productive worker in a rubber factory which has adopted the 40-hour week. At present I am making $12.40 a week. How am I affected by the code?

A—You should receive the minimum, $15 a week.

Q—I am a trimmer in a clothing factory which signed the N. R. A. I am still getting $18 a week. As living expenses are going up I am worse off now than I ever was. It's like a cut instead of a raise. How do I stand?

CYANIDE FUME! KILL YOUNG ATHLETE IN NEIGHBOR'S HOUSE

YOUTH DIED IN TRACKS, SAYS DOCTOR

Newton Lad Victim of Neighbor's Fumigating Solution

Startlingly realistic confirmation of the expert opinion of Dr. William Boos in the Costello murder case was supplied today by an investigation into the death of Arthur H. Smith, 18-year-old Newton high school track star.

In the Salem courtroom, Dr. Boos said Thursday afternoon that if Fire Capt. William Costello had inhaled the fumes of hydrocyanic acid, he would have died within one minute.

And that is just what happened to young Smith, Medical Examiner Thomas M. Gallagher, of Newton, said today in signing the boy's death certificate.

BOY DIED INSTANTLY

He said that Smith died almost instantly after entering the kitchen of Ralph Taber, a next-door neighbor in Waltham st., Newton. Convulsions seized the boy before he had a chance to take more than a single step, in the opinion of Gallagher.

On the kitchen floor was a crock containing nine pounds of sulphuric acid, mixed with water, and six pounds of sodium cyanide. In the basement was a similar crock, both prepared by Taber to fumigate the house.

There is no doubt, according to Gallagher, that the resultant hydrocyanic acid fumes caused the death of Smith. He said there is no need for an autopsy.

Gallagher said he would gladly go to Salem and tell the Costello jury of this example of the potency of hydrocyanic fumes, should either side request him to do so. This, however, is unlikely as only the closing arguments remain before the widow's fate goes to the jury.

BOY'S PRESENCE MYSTERY

Young Smith's death was accidental, Gallagher asserted, although it could not be learned just why he had entered the Taber home after that family had left to spend a week in New York. A key, fitting the Taber kitchen door, was found beside the boy's body. A similar key had been left with his sister, Barbara. She was to open a window in the Taber house from the outside, and then ventilate the place before the family's return.

The Tabers hurried back from New York this morning in response to a wire sent by Oliver K. Smith, father of the dead boy.

However, Taber was able to give little information ohter than that he had carefully prepared the mixture just before leaving yesterday to rid the place of insects. He had said that he had similarly fumigated it with hydrocyanic acid gas a year ago.

ATHER DARES DEATH

The body of the boy was found esterday, 14 hours after the Taers had left. Smith's father, a nilk salesman, was almost overome himself after he kicked hrough a window in an effort to escue his son.

The father was led to the house ext door in a search for his son when chums told him his boy had een seen headed in that direction many hours before his absence was oted.

The dead youth graduated from ewton High School last June, fter starring as a quarter-miler on e school track team. He also as prominent in Boy Scout work nd was a member of Newton hapter, Order of DeMolay.

In addition to his parents he is rivved by a brother, Kingston C. nith, and a sister, Barbara B. nith.

Soldier Husband Too Reserved, Says Mrs. Rogers

By PEGGY DOYLE

Mrs. Priscilla Rogers, whose troubled heart missed not a beat at the loud report of a toy pistol in the trembling hands of George Watts, 21-year-old Southerner, was resting comfortably last night at a Bridgewater soda fountain, guarded by a handsome state trooper.

"Love," she said, peering deep into her handbag and then into the trooper's eye, "is the most confusing thing I have ever known. I must say frankly that I am deeply upset by it, though not through with it.

HUSBAND TOO RESERVED

Looking at Mrs. Rogers, with her pert, little face, her titian hair, her lovely, long-lashed hazel eyes, it was impossible to associate tragedy with her. Here is someone, one thought, who will probably never be subjected to the direct fire of anything more serious than a popgun.

Even though she looked quite disturbed, this writer finds it impossible to make this story any more dramatic than it has been thus far in its course. It would really be embarrassing if it turned out to be a funny story because, be it ever so frivolous, a shooting IS a shooting. Even though pop goes the weazel.

"My trouble," said Mrs. Rogers, "is due to the fact that my husband (Lieut. John Holton Rogers, U. S. A., of Fortress Monroe, Va.), whom I dearly love, is very, very reserved. At least that's one of my troubles. My other trouble, that is, the trouble of the moment, is that Mr. Watts is a little bit wild.

"Somewhere between these two extremes," looking with great directness at the trooper, "is my ideal. I mean by that a person who will at least notice me, yet fire nothing at me."

"You mean an even, steady fellow," said the trooper, in an even, steady voice.

"Uh huh," said Mrs. Rogers, with a slight giggle.

BACK ON PHONE

"The judge told him positively never to see me, speak to me, molest me or shoot me again, but to my utter amazement he called me up and told me I was his one and only and without me life was too, too unbearable."

"Does that anger you?" asked the reporter. "No," said Mrs. Rogers, "although I do wish he was more reserved, though not as reserved as my husband, who is too, too reserved. Understand?"

"Oh, sure," said the trooper.

Watts, with another companion, followed Mrs. Rogers, from her Southern home to the home of her mother at Halifax, where she was visiting. When she refused to leave home with Watts, police say, the latter pulled a toy pistol and threatened to kidnap her. The complaint to police, arrest and court action followed.

Mrs. Priscilla Rogers, wife of an army lieutenant, whose complaint against George Watts, 21, of Hyattsville, Md., caused a court order to the youth to stay outside the state. Mrs. Rogers claims that the youth, armed with a toy pistol, attempted to kidnap her. (Staff Photos.)

BANKER AGAIN IN LOVE MIXUP

Abner S. Merrill, Commonwealth ave. banker, who was divorced by the attractive Gretchen Van Zandt Merrill seven years ago, awoke this morning to find himself defendant in a $50,000 breach of promise suit.

Miss Judith Nelson, former member of the Harard secretarial staff, living on the Riverway, is the girl who is suing him in Suffolk Superior Court.

Miss Nelson, who came from the mid-west a few years ago, asserts they mutually agreed to wed, but he failed to keep his word.

While Miss Nelson was still in the corn belt, Merrill and his ex-wife provided a colorful interlude in the local courts.

Mrs. Merrill, a former chorus girl on Boston and Broadway boards, charged him with cruel and abusive treatment and intoxication.

Subsequent to the divorce, Mrs. Merrill sued Cecil Parker Stewart, a descendant of Scotch kings and American first families, for $250,000 for breach of promise. But at the last minute she retired from the field of battle.

Governor Happy; 'Skippy' Back at Home Fireside

"Skippy," the brindle Scottie, owned by Richard Ely, son of the Governor, will get a new collar with his master's name and address on it in order to identify him in case he takes to wandering again.

The dog was returned to the Ely home by Miss Ruth Sawyer, of Washington st., Brighton, who said "Skippy" had followed her dog to her home Thursday. She befriended him and yesterday returned him after reading a newspaper account that the dog had been lost.

BEAUTY TITLES RUN IN THIS FAMILY

At 18, her mother was selected as the prettiest girl in a beauty contest sponsored by Barnum and Bailey Circus at Sheffield, England. Not long after that momentous event, a neighbor's boy proposed to the town beauty and in less time than it takes to tell it, Miss Annie Elizabeth Graham became Mrs. Edward Warwick Taylor.

That was more than 30 years ago, and winsome, lovely Elsie Taylor, YOU know her as Miss Massachusetts, was only a gleam in her father's eye at the time.

TITLE IN SIGHT

Today, fair, slim and 23, she is headed for fame, fortune and an excellent chance at the title of Miss America.

How did she, and her mother before her, get that way? As well ask a rose its beauty secrets. She has never used cosmetics—just a fluff of powder to take the shine off her cute little nose.

Her hair, curly and a rich chestnut in color, is an eye-wash in these days of platinum blondes and henna rinses. Her skin, well, it's the kind poems are written about—dewey, magnolia-textured and rose-tinted. Her blue eyes are unafraid, clear-eyed and twinkly as your best girl's.

TREASURE IN HOME

AND, besides all this, Elsie (pardon the familiarity, Miss Massachusetts) is a treasure in the home. She has a sunny disposition, she rivals her mother in cooking as well as charm and beauty and she has an elegant way with a duster and a vacuum.

All this on the authority of her dearest friend and sincerest critic, —her 20-year-old sister, Lillian, who is losing weight and appetite worrying that Elsie may not run away with the Miss New England honors.

It was Lillian who insisted that her "big" sister enter the contest. Quite by chance, they were attending a dance at Lakeview Ballroom, Foxboro, when the contest announcement was made.

SISTER GIVES AID

"Here's your chance, Elsie," whispered Lillian, excitedly.

"Don't be silly, Sis," mumbled Elsie, embarrassed and blushing (she blushes easy). "I'm not the type. You've got to be a Jean Harlow or a Lupe Velez to be in a beauty contest."

"So I just settled that," said Lillian in telling about it, "by getting a firm hold on her arm and taking her right up to the platform. I'm determined that way."

Anyway, Elsie, whose home is in South Walpole, was chosen to be Miss Revere and, just the other day, Miss Massachusetts, which also netted her a $500 Bulova watch and an expenses-paid trip to Atlantic City. The Miss America title is to be awarded next month in Atlantic City.

Wool Textile Code Is Suspended

Washington, Aug. 12—The application of provisions of the wool textile code limiting the use of machinery was stayed indefinitely by Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial administrator, in an executive order.

A number of interests affected by the code and its machinery limitations appealed to the administrator for exemption from limitations on the use of woolen spinning spindles and worsted combs.

THINKS PRIESTS IN CHINA SAFE

Hankow, China, Aug. 12 (AP)—The belief that eight American Passionist missionaries are safe at Yuanchow, although that town was the center of a rebel war, was expressed today by the Rev. Fr. Arthur Benson, procurator of the Passionist mission.

Fr. Benson, who is from Pittsburgh, said, however, he had not been able to communicate with the missionaries since rebels took the town, June 27. Yuanchow is about 400 miles southwest of here.

Those trapped there are the Rev. Edward McCarthy of Boston, the Rev. Francis Flaherty of Cincinnati and Sisters Genevieve Ryan, Christiana Werth, Magdaline Ivan, Rosario Goss, Saintanne Callahan and Mark Mullan, who were sent to China from Pittsburgh.

Chelsea Man Held in Kidnaping Freed

Oscar Hamilton, 28, who was arrested at New Haven, Ct., on complaint of his wife that he kidnaped his son, was free today because the court at New Haven dismissed the charges.

Hamilton said his son was suddenly thrust into his arms by his wife during an argument at New Haven over the boy's custody, and he furnished a witness o corroborate him.

Harbor Islands Searched for Trio Missing Two Days

Islands of Boston Harbor were searched today for traces of a national guardsman and two East Boston boys, who disappeared from East Boston airport Thursday.

The three are believed to have set out from the airport in a tender owned by the guardsman, Fred Kubowitsch, 38, of Zoor ave., Dedham, an attache of the national guard hangar at the airport.

The boys are Claude Nuzzo, 14 and Anthony DeBello, 11, both of Webster st., East Boston. They told their parents that they planned to attend a clambake on Governor's Island but no trace of them was found there.

The tender of a launch owned by Kubowitsch was missed from its usual place at the airport but the launch was found at an East Boston boat yard with the guardsman's hat, coat and credentials aboard.

HERO RATTLES IN SHOES OF PRESIDENT

Million Would Cause Sullivan to Part With Gift

Corp. John L. Sullivan, a mighty man, though no relation of the mightiest of men, would like to hear bids on a pair of shoes which are now his, but which were the property of the most important man in the world today—President Roosevelt. Corporal Sullivan will consider bids upward from a millions dollars, but is unlikely to accept any.

The corporal is not unused to prized possessions, for he has won 10 medals for heroism. But as he says himself, "the shoes of this great man, who is a kind one as well, are the finest gift I have ever had."

VISITED PRESIDENT

Some weeks ago, Corporal Sullivan, who is at the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea, recuperating from wounds which were received in the World War, called at the White House. He sought to interview the President and was introduced to Col. Louis Howe. It was a busy time, and Col. Howe suggested that the President might be too busy to see him.

Corporal Sullivan, however, knew that army regulations permit the winner of a Distinguished Service Cross the right to see the President, on demand, for a period of 15 minutes. Sullivan didn't demand the right but intimated that it might be a pleasant idea and the doors to the White House Executive offices were opened.

During the half hour interview he had with the President Corporal Sullivan believes he convinced the President of many things regarding the welfare of ex-soldiers, and the situation, as viewed by an unbiased individual involved, regarding the bonus. In the course of this talk, the President noticed that the ex-soldier's footwear was well worn. He offered him a pair of his own shoes, which had recently been soled.

SHOES OF GREATEST

Even at the moment it seemed a most impressive kindness, but as time went on and the corporal conferred with various soldiers, this quickly given gift took on an increasing significance. The shoes are priceless to the hero today.

Corporal Sullivan was wounded at Soissons in 1918. His medals include the D. S. C., the Verdun medal, the Mexican Border medal, decorations for valor, and he was twice awarded the French Medaille Militaire for carrying wounded from No Man's Land to the safety of the trenches. The most sensational of his heroic acts was the single-handed capturing of a German machine gun nest manned by 16 Germans.

"But my idea of genuine excitement," he explains, "is rattling around in the shoes of one of the greatest and surely one of the finest men that ever lived."

Bed in Lake One Cure for the Heat

Oklahoma City, Aug. 12—Lewis Bell sleeps in a lake these hot August nights. It's atop a downtown office building, for which Bell is engineer. He keeps two inches of water on the roof, which is walled in. Each night he wades to his bed, right in the middle of the "lake." He says the water keeps the temperature 15 degrees cooler.

CUBANS CELEBRATE AS DICTATOR MACHADO RESIGNS

stormed the office of Heraldo De Cuba, a newspaper which had supported him. The building was set afire and the interior wrecked.

JIMINEZ SLAIN

Meanwhile another mob carted a piano out of the presidential palace, and carried it to the office of the Diario de la Marina, an opposition newspaper. There the piano was broken into bits to provide souvenirs for this great day in Cuban history.

General Machado was believed to be at his country estate outside of Havana, heavily guarded but not injured.

One of the mainstays of his regime, Colonel Antonio Jiminez, who headed the Porra—the secret police—was shot dead by soldiers. His body was kicked about and trampled on.

Jimenez wounded a man celebrating the anti-Machado victory and then turned his gun on a group of soldiers. The soldiers shot him down. Two of his companions were wounded.

Exactly how many many members of the Porra had been slain could not be established immediately, but the total was at least five.

A howling mob, carrying its leaders shoulder high, marched through the streets to attack the Porra headquarters.

The entire city was delirious with joy. Great crowds were abroad and trucks full of policemen and soldiers crawled at snail's pace through the streets.

Everywhere the people seized on "Manos arriba!" "Hands up!"—as the theme of the revolution.

SOLDIERS CHEERED

Soldiers addressing throngs from balconies drew repeated roars of applause. The mere sight of uniforms, which last week inspired fear was sufficient to start demonstrations.

When the police thronged to the revolutionary side, the city was left practically uncontrolled. But the people were so exuberant that chances of serious trouble were small.

Hundreds of youth grasping the edges of a tremendous Cuban flag paraded up and down the steps of the Capitol.

President Machado's decision to retire followed closely on a bloodless coup d'etat by the army last night in which military units seized fortresses and other strategic points in Havana and demanded that the president get out.

PARLEY ON SUCCESSION

A conference to discuss candidency got under way among Ambassador Welles, Colonel Julio Sanguily, one of the leaders of yesterday's coup d'etat; Cosme de la Torriente, former ambassador to the United States, and various members of the retiring government.

Although Col. Ferrer was the outstanding possibility for the presidency, he told the Associated Press he did not want the post.

"Delegations of students and from the ABC Society are continually calling on me and the soldiers have insisted, but I have refused because I feared that the people might interpret our movement as a set-up for a pre-selected leader," he said.

"I left private life and joined our movement solely to avoid the shame of American intervention, and I hope now to return to my profession."

The police, hitherto loyal to the Machado regime, began flocking to the army. More than 400 of them reported at the Maximo Gomez barracks.

Army units throughout the island shifted to the anti-Machado forces as emphatically as the Havana garrison.

It was generally expected that the general strike, which now is openly discredited as a move to accomplish Machado's withdrawal, will be terminated tomorrow.

SALUTE PRESIDENT

President De Cespedes was approved not only by all political factions but also by the army.

At 12:30 p. m. the Cabana fortress gave the new head of the nation a salute of 21 guns.

On request of the president Gen. Herrera will remain secretary of war. For two hours until 12 o'clock Gen. Herrera was the legal president of the nation.

The Machado followers hoped to arrange things so that Gen. Herrera might be the permanent head, but the army refused to accept a military candidate. The army agreed, however, that Gen. Herrera might remain as secretary of war.

Britain Disclaims Protest on Cuba

London, Aug. 12 (AP)—The foreign office issued official denial today of reports that the British Minister at Havana had made representations to the United States ambassador there in connection with damage to British property in recent political disorders.

Instead it was said the British minister had reported that the British colony was safe. The only damage was to a hut for cable connections at Cienfuegos, which was set afire Thursday. The British minister asked the Cuban government to investigate this incident.

40-Hour Week for Brockton Workers

Brockton, Aug. 12—Shoe workers in factories controlled by the Brockton Shoe Manufacturers' Association will start on a 40-hour week Monday in accordance with the newly approved NRA code for shoe workers, it was announced in a public statement issued to newspapers here.

CUBA'S NEW DEAL

President Machado resigns and Carlos M. de Cespedes, former ambassador to the United States is agreed upon by all factions to be the new president.

Chief of the retiring executives' secret police slain by troops after he wounds celebrator of the change in rule.

Col. Horacio Ferrer, leader of coup de'etat favored a successor.

President Roosevelt, en route to Washington, looks for complete settlement of Cuban crisis by today's developments.

Havana forecasts end of general strike by tomorrow. Better feeling evident among the people as end of Machado rule is assured.

MACHADO PUT UP HARD FIGHT

He found the presidential seat a powder keg, but made drastic use of his military resources to prevent his foes from setting it off. There have been battles and bombings all around him, almost continuously since the August, 1931, rebellion.

There have been several attempts to assassinate him since he became President for his first term on March 20, 1925. But an impregnable wall of defense was set up around his presidential palace and he was under close guard whenever he sought a change of scenery.

Machado boasted he would never quit Cuba, for whose independence he had fought, and declared he was determined to die in the land where lived his turbulent life. He gained control of all political parties and had the old constitution, bequeathed to Cuba by the United States, so amended as to insure him of the presidency until May 20, 1935.

Machado was a military man. He was cited for exploits of valor in the revolution of 1895 when as a youth he fought under Gen. Juan Bruno Zayas and was promoted gradually to the rank of brigadier-general.

After the independence of Cuba was won, Machado became lieutenant-colonel of the Rural Guards.

When Gen. Jose Miguel Gomez became president in 1908, he appointed Machado chief of the Cuban army. Later the president created the office of inspector general of all armed forces of the republic and this post went to Machado. Machado was secretary of interior also under Gomez and took a leading part in settling the Negro rebellion.

He obtained direct authority over the national army of 15,000 and about half as many more rural guards and national police forces. When attacks against him progressed the old campaigner personally made the rounds of the army posts.

Lily Pond Guide for Fishermen

Mountain Home Ark., Aug. 12—Anglers have discovered a practical use for a lily pond recently constructed on the courthouse lawn.

Several bass and a number of bream occupy the pond. If one of the boys figures on going fishing he takes a few cracker crumbs and flips them into the lily pond. If the fish rise to them it is a sign they are striking, and he grabs his flyrod and hies to the river.

Estonia Proclaims State of Emergency

Tallinn, Estonia, Aug. 12—A state of emergency has been proclaimed by the Estonian government. All organizations of ex-soldiers, Socialist youths, and two other bodies whose members wear uniforms have been suppressed.

The official reason given was "irresponsible actions and spreading of alarming news threatening public peace."

Wakefield Man Hurt In Isle Crash

George Evans, 24, of Lawrence st., Wakefield, was recovering today from cuts on the face, sustained in the 319th accident involving the now-famous Cambridge safety islands. The accident occurred shortly after midnight when Evans' machine demolished a blinker on the island at Massachusetts ave. and Martin st.

Havana, Aug. 12 (INS)—Gen. Alberto Herrera, military dictator and potential provisional president of Cuba, today pledged restoration of order throughout the island republic and continuation of most friendly relations with the United States.

He announced, however, he would not accept the presidency unless his choice were approved by United States Ambassador Sumner Welles and the United States government.

Through an interpreter he said:

"I will always be a friend to the United States because they who were in the Army of Liberation can never forget the timely help of the people of the United States and the Army of the United States, given in the war with Spain.

"I, who served in that Army of Liberation side by side with American troops, can say it is always a question of sentimentality with us.

"We forever owe a debt of gratitude to America."

"Will you be able to settle the general strike throughout the republic?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied. "Not only the strike, but I am sure as soon as a change comes that all business conditions and everything else will automatically be restored to normal."

3 MORE CRASH SAFETY LIGHTS

Lights on safety islands in Massachusetts ave., Cambridge, took a severe tossing around from autoists, during the past 24 hours. Lights on three islands have been destroyed.

All three autoists blamed poor visibility, due to misting weather.

A short time later, Charles E. Butler of Gertrude st., Lynn, wrecked the light and his car at Massachusetts ave. and Garfield st. Finally, Warren J. Welch of Winter st., Cambridge, plowed into the light at Massachusetts ave. and Dudley st.

The total number of lights destroyed, since this system was established several years ago, now totals 321.

World Fair Thrills at Hope of Bluenose-Thebaud Race

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP)—Renewal of the long standing rivalry between two deep sea fishermen on the waters of Lake Michigan was in prospect for Chicagoans today.

The Gertrude L. Thebaud, pride of the Gloucester fishing fleet, was due here tomorrow. Her rival, the Bluenose, of Nova Scotia, queen of the Atlantic and international champion, will meet the Gloucestermen and escort them into the harbor.

Yachting enthusiasts already have started discussions as to which ship would be superior under the different conditions which prevail in fresh water. Capt. Angus Walters of the Bluenose said today he would challenge the Gloucestermen to a race as soon as he came within hailing distance. Capt. Ben Pine skipper of the Thebaud, has never refused a challenge.

Havana Celebrants Crush Slain Police Chief's Body

Havana, Aug. 12 (AP)—Throngs of demonstrators hailing the anti-Machado revolution raided the grounds of the presidential palace this afternoon, stripping the gardens of shrubbery and flowers with which they paraded about.

Cries of "Let's get the secret police!" arose, and the crowds started for police headquarters, bearing their leaders on their shoulders.

The Porra, President Machado's secret police, are blamed by the people for most of the political killings of the last three years.

Soldiers and sailors, placed on guard at the presidential palace, made no effort to stop the celebrators.

One incident revealed a different spirit. It followed the killing by soldiers of Colonel Antonio Jimenez, who was the chief of the secret police, after he had wounded a demonstrator.

Cheering men kicked the body and trampled it.

Then there were cries of "let's get Machado and Anciart!"

Skidding Car Just Misses Fast Train

This was a lucky day for Frank C. Gorman of 15 Stocker ave., Lynn.

Gorman's car skidded and crashed through the Boston & Maine crossing gates across the Newburyport turnpike in Malden, just as an express train came by. But, Gorman's car finally stopped less than five inches from the engine.

CUBAN CRISIS EXPECTED BY ROOSEVELT

En route with President Roosevelt, Aug. 12—President Roosevelt confidently watched for a break in the Cuban crisis as he travelled back to Washington.

Throughout the night his secretary, Marvin H. McIntyre, kept contact with Washington while the President's special train sped from Hyde Park, N. Y., down the west bank of the Hudson River, past New York City and beyond the capital.

All signs indicated that the President was expecting something to happen in Cuba in response to his appeal for an end to political warfare in the interests of economic stability.

Reinvigorated by his two weeks at home, Mr. Roosevelt looked forward eagerly to his first visit to some of the civilian conservation camps, established as a result of a proposal which he made and put through Congress.

Alighting from the train early today at Harrisonburg, Va., the President planned to motor through the Shenandoah Valley and along the sky line route of the Blue Ridge mountain range to the capital, which he expected to reach before nightfall. Three of the conservation corps camps were selected for visits during the ride.

Missing New York Wife Sought Here

Search was being made here today for Mrs. Marian Carrano, wife of Robert Carrano, of Slingerlands, N. Y., who came here yesterday and informed police he had learned his wife, who has been missing for three weeks, had applied for a position in a Temple pl. store.

Steaks and Cream For Fair Gorillas

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP)—Superior Judge Peter H. Schwaba not only gave Mrs. Gertrude A. Lintz an injunction, restraining a barrel manufacturer from taking her ten World's Fair gorillas in satisfaction for an allegedly unpaid bill, but he directed fair officials to allow funds for feeding the animals steaks and cream.

U. S. Liquor Output Leaps

Washington, Aug. 12 (AP)—The Bureau of Industrial Alcohol today set the production of medicinal liquors at 7,000,000 gallons for the calendar year, 1934.

Officials said the allocation, largest since the Eighteenth Amendment became effective, was made necessary because of the depletion of medicinal liquor stocks due to relaxation of restrictions on prescription distillates.

The year's allocation compares with an annual production of 2,000,000 gallons in all previous years since 1929. Distillation of liquor was abandoned in 1919, but was resumed in 1929.

The bureau said there might be a further reallocation of production in the fall if it appears that the 7,000,000 gallon figure will not be adequate.

CHIEF'S DRIVER HIT BY RYAN

The suspensions followed a series of accidents at Lexington, July 19, in connection with the Malden Chamber of Commerce outing. A fleet of motor cars were carrying Commerce members to Stow Country Club, with Kelley leading the procession, and Walle, driving Fire Chief William J. Dooling.

Kelley drove his cycle through a red light. Walle hit an ice truck. James Sullivan, son of the Lexington police chief, was riding in the ice truck and suffered injuries. No arrests were made but Mr. Ryan ordered an investigation.

Kelley will do traffic duty, while Walle has been assigned to fire apparatus.

15,000 LYNN SHOE WORKERS TO RETURN

Between 12,000 and 15,000 striking shoe workers in Boston, Chelsea, and Lynn may return to work Monday under an agreement signed by the representatives and those of their employers after a six-hour conference in Washington yesterday.

The agreement calls for a 20 per cent flat wage increase to protect the workers from loss of income resulting from the reduction of working hours from 48 to [illegible] hours weekly. The increase [illegible] be effective until Sept. 15.

The agreement came as the end of a two-weeks' tie-up of the shoe manufacturing industry in the three cities. It was signed by Peter J. Walsh, counsel for the National Shoe Workers' Union, and Judge Elijah Adlow representing the employers.

The Washington conference was called by Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, who will endorse the agreement before it is submitted to shoe workers here for acceptance. It is expected that the striking workers here will ratify the agreement.

You learn something about the power of habit from mules on cotton lands. All their lives the mules have been trained to cultivate cotton, walking between the rows, not stepping on young plants.

Now government orders millions of acres of cotton plowed under, and solitary mules, attached to light plows, are suddenly required to walk down the cotton row, trampling the cotton plants and plowing them under.

The average mule absolutely refuses. He has been taught not to step on cotton plants, has been beaten for doing it, and he will not change.

LINDY REPORTS NEW PEAK IN GREENLAND

New York, Aug. 12—The sighting of a mountain higher than any other heretofore known in Greenland and unrecorded on maps has been reported by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife, who are charting a northern air route to Europe.

Another topographical feature which the Lindberghs reported could not be found on charts was a fjord, or possibly navigable waterway, which they followed inland for more than a hundred miles.

Officials of Pan-American Airways, Inc., who received the reports, said both discoveries may force sharp revision of existing maps of the region.

The mountain, which the report said, is higher than either Mount Evans or Mount Forel, both in Greenland, and the Fjord, were found on the eastern coast of the island. The mountain is west and slightly north of Scoresby Sun, midway along the coast.

The Fjord, located in the Blosserville section between Angmagsalik and Scoresby Sun, never has been sailed or explored probably because of ice conditions.

Flying from Angmagsalik to Clavering island, the farthest north the Lindberghs have gone, they spotted the waterway and deviated from their course to follow the Fjord to its end.

"Mariners probably avoided investigating it because of ice conditions in the harbor," an official of Pan-American said. "From the air, Col. Lindbergh said it appeared as though the fjord might be navigable." The official he did not know whether the expedition's ship, the Jelling, would attempt exploration.

A recent Lindbergh report recorded the sighting of a herd of muskoxen and polar bears in a section inland from Scoresbey Sun. Herds in that area were believed to be extinct.

The Lindberghs now are stationed in Julianehaab, waiting for good flying weather to hop to Reykjavik, Iceland, which probably will be one of their last sorties before returning to the United States at the end of August.

Lindy Sees Year-Round Plane Hops to Europe

Julianehaab, Greenland, Aug. 12 (INS)—Firm belief that year-round airplane service between Europe and United States, by way of Greenland, is feasible was expressed by Col. Lindbergh, in an interview today.

"The chief difficulty," he said, "would be maintaining regularity of service. In early days of flying, you had to consider weather. Now we have only two things to consider, fog, and rain when temperature is below freezing, causing planes to become ice coated.

"But both of these may be overcome and make flying absolutely secure. Radio is useful in landin in fog, and experiments to avoid ice-coating have been successful.

"I firmly believe it is possible to carry on an all-year round service between America and Europe by way of Greenland."

Owing to a strong wind and rain yesterday, Col. Lindbergh and his wife did not leave as scheduled for Reykjavik.

British Laborite Is Barred by U. S.

New York, Aug. 12—The organization committee of the United States Congress Against War said the United States consul in England refused a visa to Tom Mann, famous figure in the British labor movement. Mann, 86-year-old leader of last winter's hunger march in London, was invited to speak at the Congress Against War, Sept. 10.

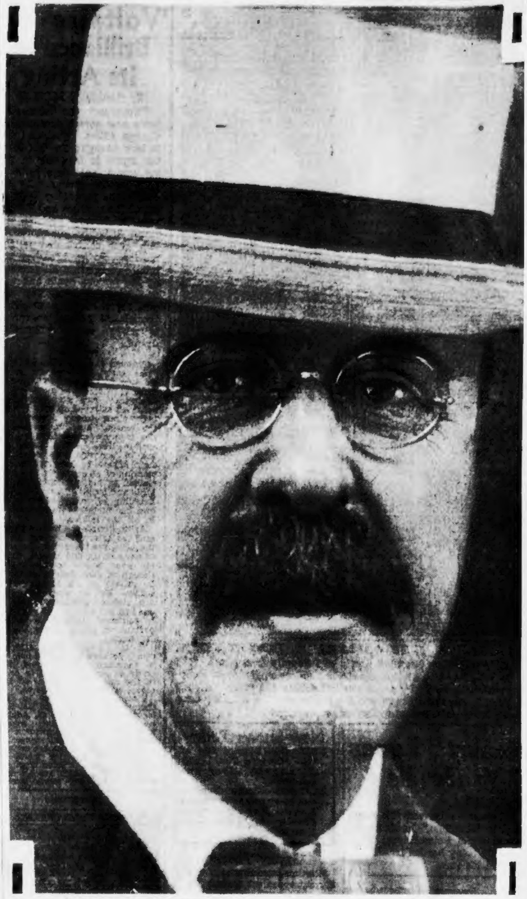
A Clean Fight -:- Lomasney's Watchword



Four years over the three score and ten mark, Boston's beloved political leader, Martin Lomasney, was barely alive at 2 a. m. The mahatma of Boston politics, surrounded by friends and political proteges, then rallied in a desperate fight with the ravages of bronchial pneumonia. Rep. John Higgins of the West End acted as contact man at the veteran's bedside, informing the public of his famous chief's condition.

WHITMAN MAN FRAUD VICTIM

Chicago, Aug. 12 — Charged by Federal authorities with being a swindler wanted in a score of cities, William Elmer Mead was arraigned in police court here on a warrant charging conspiracy to defraud W. T. Hamilton, of Lima, O., of $60,000.

Bond on the charge was set at $25,000. Postal Inspector Herbert Graham, who came here from New York to work on the case, said that if Mead made the bond he would be charged immediately with mail fraud.

The fraud charge, Graham said, would allege Mead conspired to defraud Parker C. Morton, of Whitman, Mass., of $13,000. Graham said the alleged conspiracy occurred at Jacksonville, Fla., in 1921.

Long Sought Mother Lode Is Found in Montana

Virginia City, Mont., Aug. 12—The mother lode, mystical matron in whose pursuit young men have grown old and died in thousands of mines and placer holes of the West, is found!

At least Robert Garrison, one of those who long has sought the source of placer gold, believes he has found her in a shaft at Old Baldy mountain. And hundreds of persons, called by Garrison's cry of "pay dirt" are hurrying to the mine to see for themselves the ore which Garrison says is producing gold at the rate of $15 to $100 to the square yard.

It is 70 years since the first cry of an exultant miner sent the gold seekers into Alder Gulch and it has been ten years since the monster dredges of the Virginia City Mining Co. sucked in their last draught of earth and found it useless to go on.

In 70 years $150,000,000 was taken from Alder Gluch but never was a discovery made after the first one by Hugh White. Garrison and the mining company believe their discovery is as great as his and that the mother lode which showered out flakes of gold for miners to pan, has at last been traced to her mountain hideaway.

SEEK HAVERHILL MAN IN WOODS

Haverhill, Aug. 12—For the second day a large posse of citizens and officers, headed by Deputy Sheriff Charles B. Wheeler, today beat through the brush and woods in Atkinson, N. H., in search for John Adams, of 150 Grove st., Haverhill, who disappeared while blueberry picking Thursday afternoon.

A promising clue, given the Haverhill police late last night by Henry Garley of 94 How st., Haverhill and Roy Neal of Blossom st., Bradford, led to a fruitless search through the woods that lasted until after midnight.

Adams, who is 50 years of age and single, lives with his sister, Mrs. Alice Burke. The couple, several weeks ago, went to a camp in Conley's Grove, in the Island Pond section o fSalem, N. H., for a vacation, planning to return to Haverhill today.

On Thursday afternoon about 3, Adams went into the woods to pick blueberries. He was last seen going in the direction of Atkinson.

ESCAPE AT DEER ISLAND FOILED

The prisoner, James Calo, 24, alias George Festa, alias Joseph DiCarlo, of Causeway st., West End, had escaped from his cell and dropped to the jail yard from a top floor window. He started to swim across Shirley Gut when he was seen by a guard on Point Shirley.

The guard, F. W. Gallagher, spotted Calo in the dim light as he walked along the shore and immediately notified Matthew Kelley and John V. Connolly, two other guards, and the trio fired at the swimmer.

He swam 75 yards from the island and then apparently became frightened and headed back. As he came ashore he was taken into custody by Philip Wall, a guard.

Officials Ousted From Election Jobs

Haverhill, Aug. 12—The absence of the names of three city officials on the list of precinct officers for the current year, as prepared by the municipal council, climaxes a four-year fight by Alderman James Costello against the practice by which city officers drew more than double pay on election days.

Those removed included Frank B. Goodwin, assessor, J. Beck Pierce, deputy city auditor, and Mrs. Rosamond Tarr, clerk in the assessor's office.

Hutchinson Ready to Fight Charge

Edward S. Hutchinson, Harvard sophomore and son of the wealthy Sidney E. Hutchinson of Philadelphia and Beverly Farms, today engaged counsel to fight a charge in municipal court Monday that he punched a Beacon Hill matron a week ago.

Young Hutchinson denied he struck Mrs. William Bacon, wife of the owner of Windsor Club Apartments at 54 South Russell st., Beacon Hill.

Gov. Rolph Vetoes Income Tax Bill

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 12 (US)—Governor Rolph has announced that he would allow the state personal income tax to go to a "pocket veto."

His statement means that the income taax bill voted by the Legislature will not become a law, and that California will be spared the exactions of a tax which virtually all groups of citizens branded as economically destructive.

Woman's Scream Fatal to Husband

Wheeling, W. Va., Aug. 12 (AP)—Michael Gartner, 88, and his wife, atherine, 74, were arranging furniture in their new home. Wind blew a door shut, imprisoning Mrs. Gartner in a cupboard.

For 20 minutes she screamed. In desperation she threw herself against the door, forcing it open. She found her husband dead from a heart attack believed to have been brought on by her screams.

Workman Killed in Balloon Tests

Brussels, Aug. 12—One workman was killed and another was seriously injured here when the gondola of Max Cosyns' stratosphere balloon exploded while undergoing pressure tests.

The constructor of the gondola, M. Nacelle, was injured but only slightly. Cosyns, the young Belgian physicist who accompanied Prof. Auguste Piccard into the stratosphere last summer, escaped injury.

Garrett Aids Boy In Court at Quincy

Quincy and Weymouth police were surprised today to see Oliver B. Garrett, ousted former leader of the Boston police liquor squad, leaving the Quincy courthouse.

It developed that Garrett appeared before Judge Nash in the juvenile session in behalf of a boy who had got into trouble with the Quincy police. The boy was placed on probation.

MALIN'S DEATH ACCIDENTAL

Venice, Cal., Aug. 12—A coroner's jury, after hearing a new version on the death of Jean Malin, night club entertainer, returned a verdict that death was caused by drowning but that it was unable to determine the cause or responsibility.

C. E. Aspin, a musician at the Ship Cafe here, where Malin had made a farewell appearance shortly before his auto plunged over an ocean pier, testified he was sitting in his auto waiting for some friends when Malin approached him and asked Aspin's aid in starting the motor of his auto. The witness said he drove his machine behind Malin's and pushed it around a circle before the entrance of the cafe.

The motor did not start and Aspin said Malin got out and tinkered with the engine. He returned to the driver's seat and asked the musician to push his machine again. Aspin complied.

The witness said Malin's auto started to coast down the pier runway. Aspin disengaged his machine and dropped back. Then he saw it swing sharply to the right and plunge through a guard rail.

War Vets Protest Slash in Aid

Newton World War veterans, who have been receiving soldiers' aid, will appear at Newton City Hall today to protest to Acting Mayor Roy F. Collins against the new system which deprives them of cash aid and forces them to select a limited list of groceries instead.

The veterans claim they are entitled to cash assistance and many have voiced disapproval of the type of food included in the welfare menus.

Nazi Ban on Girls Going With Jews

Berlin, Aug. 12 (AP)—The names of Aryan girls found in the company of Jewish escorts at parties or picnics will be published in the Hessische Volkswacht, a dispatch from Kassel said today.

From Straubing came news that Jews had been barred from bathing in the Danube.

Senator Glass Sails for Rest In Europe

New York, Aug. 12 (US)—Senator Carter Glass, chairman of the Senate Banking committee, sailed last night aboard the liner Majestic with Admiral Cary T. Grayson, who acted as physician to the late President Wilson. Senator Glass said he was going abroad for a rest with Grayson and would visit Paris, London and Budapest. At Budapest, he remarked they will be joined by Bernard Baruch.

Reformatory Terms for Maine Pair

Sanford, Me., Aug. 12—For their disappearance into the woods here for a week, Miss Dorothea Davis, 17, of North Berwick, and Orville Chadbourne, 28, married, of Sanford, were under terms at separate reformatories today.

The couple were found living on a diet of berries and other wild products of the woods. No other charge other than "misbehavior" was placed against them.

Body of Youth Missing Week Found

The body of 15-year-old David Burns of Columbia st., Somerville, was recovered from Charles river, near Magazine Beach, after a search that started when his clothing was found on the river bank.

Raymond Souza, 13, of Webster ave., Somerville, a chum who accompanied the Burns boy for a swim told police he last saw the Burns boy on a raft. As far as could be learned no one saw the boy drown.

Funeral Services for Local Author

Funeral services for Miss Amy B. Hamburger, Beacon Hill author and social worker, will be held today at Emmanuel Church, West Roxbury.

The body of Miss Hamburger was returned to Boston from North Conway, N. H., after she had been killed in a 100-foot fall while climbing West Royce mountain with members of the Appalachian Mountain Climbing Club.

Lindberghs May Sail to Iceland

New York, Aug. 12—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh may sail from Greenland for Reykjavik, Iceland, today, Pan-American Airways, Inc., was notified here.

The couple, making an aerial survey of the North Atlantic, have been held at Julianehaab, Greenland, by bad weather.

Kidnaped Boy Found At Home In Bed

New Bedford, Aug. 12—After searching for hours in the belief that 15-year-old Kenneth Taylor, of North st., was kidnaped, police found the boy safely tucked into bed at his home. He explained he had left his father's garage, for which he was caring, because he got sleepy.

Ashes of Pair to Be Tossed Into Ocean

A unique ceremony, to which the ashes of a husband and wife will be mingled and scattered over Massachusetts Bay, will take place next week, to fulfill an agreement made many years ago.

The pact was made by Joseph P. Hatch, who died seven years ago at 88, and his wife, Mrs. Jeannette W. Hatch, 76, who died at her home in Shelton rd., Quincy, last Sunday. Hatch was cremated after his death and his ashes have been kept at the Forest Hills Crematory.

Mrs. Hatch was cremated Wednesday and the ashes of the couple will be mingled today. Early next week they will be taken aboard a boat and taken to some point in the bay, as yet not selected. There they will be scattered over the water.

Mrs. James O'Dowd, of Shelton rd., Quincy, daughter of the couple, said her parents decided on this ceremony because of their great love of the sea. Hatch was a seaman in his youth and later was superintendent of the Mariner's House, North sq., Boston.

YOUTHS HELD IN DENTIST DEATH

New York, Aug. 12—Indictments charging first degree murder in the death of Dr. E. Warren Sylla, wealthy dentist, found strangled in his fashionable East 90th st. apartment, were returned against Lawrence J. Kelly, 26, of Hartford, Conn., and Edward F. Moran, 22, of Stamford, Conn.

The two youths appeared to answer charges of suspicion of homicide. Magistrate H. Stanley Renaud dismissed the charges and the two men were turned over to detectives for arraignment next week on the murder indictments.

Joseph Terasowich, 30, and Stanley Kenefic, 22, both of Stamford, who also had been held in connection with the dentist's slaying, were liberated by Magistrate Renaud, but were immediately taken into custody as material witnesses. They were held in $2500 bail.

NEW DEAL ON POWER RATES

Washington, Aug. 12 (US)—Development of a great power empire under the administration's "new deal" for consumers of electricity assuring low rates, will be attaine without endangering the grea army of investors in power utilities, according to a prediction b Frank R. McNinch, chairman o the Federal Power Commission.

Declaring great amounts o "water" still remain in power utility corporations, he predicted a would be squeezed out as a resul of the government's [illegible] of the government's embarkatio into the power field and privat utilities would be healthier.

McNinch said the history of rat reductions for domestic electricit during the last ten years ha shown the return to the investor in utilities had been graduall greater than they were under th higher rates.

The power commission is starting immediately a comprehensiv nation wide survey of the powe situation from an economic standpoint, dealing with generatio transmission costs, and distribution.

WARNERS TO MAKE 'MANDALAY'

Ruth Chatterton to Be Starred in Paul Harvey's Story; Most of Action on River Boat

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 11—"Mandalay," a story by Paul Harvey Fox, will be Ruth Chatterton's next for Warners when she finishes "Female." Major part of the action will take place on a river boat. Chances are that Lyle Talbot, who is forging steadily ahead, will draw the lead opposite Ruth.

Harriet Parsons

Talbot has attracted much attention lately by his excellent performance in "One Sunday Afternoon," the James Hagen play which closes its run at the El Capitan Theater tomorrow. He plays the part of the swaggering but lovable "Biff" Grimes which Gary Cooper is portraying in the screen version.

* * *

British Star Signed

No Hollywood producer feels a trip abroad is complete unless he brings back a European "discovery." Harry Cohn, running true to form, has signed Binnie Barnes, noted British stage and screen actress. Miss Barnes played one of the leads in the original London production of "Cavalcade." Her last film was "The Private Life of Henry, the VIIIth," English film which starred Charles Laughton. Cohn has put her under a long term contract, and she'll play the lead opposite Leslie Howard in "The Lady Is Willing," which Gilbert Miller is directing in London for Columbia. Then she'll come to Hollywood so Harry can "discover" her.

* * *

Dillon Pleases Warners

Warners are so pleased with the short subject John Francis Dillon has just made for them that they are putting him to work on a feature immediately. Dillon will direct "The New Racket," a story which deals with the effect on drug stores of the unlimited sale of prescription liquor. Bette Davis and Ricardo Cortez are slated for roles and Warners are hoping to borrow Joel McCrea for one of the leads. Joel, however, is being kept so busy on his home lot that it's doubtful whether Radio will part with him.

* * *

Heard and Overheard

Columbia is trying to get Pola Negri for the Leontovich role in "Twentieth Century" and one of my prize over-hearers tells me she'll be in town shortly. Claire Dodd, who gets that annoyed at being told she resembles Marlene Dietrich, signed for the heavy role in "My Woman" opposite Victor Jory and Helen Twelvetrees. Ralph Murphy gets assignment to direct "She Made Her Bed," Carole Lombard's first on her return from Reno. 'Twill be a musical and John Farrow and Richard Schayer have written the screen play. Edward Ellis signed for character role in Connie Bennett's "Without Glory" at Radio. Edmund Breese and Morgan Wallace added to cast of Columbia's "Above The Clouds." George Le Guere, once Jane Cowl's leading man, is playing a small part.

* * *

Mona Maris Heartbroken

Here's one of those ironic incidents which have given Hollywood the name of Heartbreak Town. For three years Mona Maris has been trying to get away from Spanish versions and heavy roles. She has worked tirelessly to eradicate her accent in the hope of getting a chance to play straight English-speaking leads. When the new Seven Seas Corporation recently offered her a heavy role in "Cane Fire," to be made in Honolulu, she delayed signing as long as possible, having a hunch that something was about to turn up for her here. It didn't—so she finally signed. The next day Paramount offered her the lead in "White Woman," a much-discussed and much sought after role. And now Seven Seas won't release her and she has to forfeit the chance for which she has waited so long.

This and That

Mary Pickford left tonight for a brief visit to New York. She accompanies her cousin and pal, Verna Chalif, who'll purchase some snappy millinery for the new hat shop she is opening in Westwood. While in New York Mary will make arrangements for the publication of a short story she has written and look over the new crop of plays (if any) for suitable film material. Connie Cummings brought back some stunning gowns from Molyneux and a new crop of freckles which have to be hidden by a special makeup. Connie wears a gorgeous solitaire pearl as an engagement ring but no wedding ring. The Jeanette MacDonald-M. G. M. deal is a straight five picture arrangement with no options. Two will be made this year and three next. Only vehicle set so far is "Cat and the Fiddle" which is slated to go into production next Tuesday, Heaven and labor unions willing.

Snapshots of Hollywood

CLAUDETTE COLBERT 'n' NORMAN FOSTER, MARIE DRESSLER, JOE E. BROWN among the celebrities attending the Columbia preview of "Lady For A Day" to do honor to its star, MAY ROBSON; MARY BRIAN, BIG BOY WILLIAMS, the REG TOOMEYS, PEGGY SHANNON and HUSBAND, NOEL FRANCIS, GLENDA FARRELL 'n' BOB RISKIN, helping celebrate "Moonlight and Pretzels" night at the Roosevelt patio roof; JUNE CLYDE, ONSLOW STEVENS, Mr. and Mrs. DON NOYES having a spirited match at that ping pong emporium on Wilshire Boulevard; JACK LA RUE and his best girl, MARGARET LUCILLE, HARRY LANGDON 'n' MABLE KENTON, MADGE EVANS 'n' TOM GALLERY giving a hand to the new set-up at the Cafe de Paree which features BUDDY FISHER'S music and GENE STARKE'S cuisine; FAY WRAY finishing work on "The Bowery" and driving up to Santa Barbara for her first between-pictures rest this year; PEGGY HOPKINS JOYCE back in town and dining at the Beverly Derby with FRANK ORSATTI. That's all today. It won't be long now.

Harriet Parsons' bright column from Hollywood will appear in the Boston Sunday Advertiser also while Louella O. Parsons, the regular contributor, is on vacation.

Thrills and Throbs in Her Art

Movie Stars Good Listeners

BOB RISKIN GLENDA FARRELL JUNE COLLYER STUART ERWIN

Hollywood nights for the stars are varied—some take to the beaches, others to the night clubs, others to home parties. To Beverly Hills, late one afternoon sped the news photographer hearing that June Collyer and her husband, the inimitable comic, Stuart Erwin, "stealer" of pictures, were shining lights. He found them listening raptly and happily to a guest. The latter proved to be Bob Riskin, a well-known figure in Hollywood activities. He is at the left telling the story. Glenda Farrell, June and Stuart are the listeners. It must have been the latest joke on some director or producer.

'Camille' Here Another Week

The most important "legit" event in Boston's summer season, Jane Cowl's "Camille," begins the last week of its engagement Monday at the Tremont. As the tragic Marguerite Gautier, June Cowl, America's foremost actress, has added another role to her now long list of memorable stage performances. Rollo Peters, too, won new honors by his outstanding work as Armand Duval, Marguerite's lover.

There are four acts and the curtain rises at 8:20 p. m. and Wednesday and Saturday matinees at 2:20 p. m.

Vaudeville

A dash of what goes to make up a real vaudeville bill is included in "Big 8" stage show, scheduled to open at the Scollay, Monday. A motion picture star, radio celebrities, singers, comedians, night club favorites, comedy bicyclists, equilibrists, and stars from musical comedy have been assembled for the show.

The headliner will be the smiling singer from the talkies, Frank Richardson.

In the second position, "Creedon's Revels" will hold sway. It is a night club unit presentation.

The musical comedy stars, Helen Hellar and George Riley, will be seen in a comedy sketch, "I Beg Your Pardon." The Radio Quartette, composed of Emma Bollinger, Florence Frommelt, Efram Vitis and Hector De'ara will offer singing. George Dormonde and partner in "Scientific Nonsense" feature the comedy unicycle; Harry Small and Sisters are "High Hat Dancers;" Marcy Brothers and Bernice have a "Comedy Variety Offering" made up of comedy songs and dances; and the show will be brought to a close by the Helen Bach Trio, "Equilibristic Aces."

Brilliant Photoplay Paces Excellence of Vaudeville

By HARRIS MORGAN

Loew's Orpheum has class on stage and screen this new week. The photodrama is "Another Language," handsomely produced and made brilliant by the acting of Helen Hayes. The vaudeville fare is likewise fine, the bill being headed by Harry Rose, with excellent acts built around his turn.

* * *

The film, adapted from the drama of family life by Rose Franken, shows Miss Hayes and Montgomery as a pair of newly weds who find the honeymoon is over when the husband's relatives take charge of their domestic affairs. Edward H. Griffith directed the picture, bringing to the screen a swiftly paced story that has tense interest from start to finish. The picture has a dramatic climax when a nephew falls in love with his new aunt. Her husband's neglect brings about a daring situation which eventually embroils the entire family.

The vaudeville offers Harry Rose, irrepressible "Broadway Jester." He is of the old school of sure-fire variety comedians. In turn, he is jovial, lyric and amusingly talkative. Ann Pritchard is a talented dancer. She is given able assistance by Jack Goldie, blackfaced entertainer of Boston nativity, and the personable Sibley Sisters.

Comedy is the offering of Jay Mills and Gertie Green. More comedy is furnished the audience by Seed and London, hokum comedians, with Jacquelyn Robert's assistance. Kendall Capps has steps and tunes to offer and Togo and Chiyo are seen in a round of acrobatics.

Laughter Reigns at State

So powerful is the tug of Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery on the movie theater patrons, that Loew's State has been playing to capacity all week with "Tugboat Annie." For that reason the picture is held over to next week, an unusual step in the Back Bay house, where holdovers have been as rare as a blue moon.

Theirren, the famous tenor, aft- three triumphant weeks at the same theater, is held for his fourth week, which is a high mark for the home, and perhaps for the whole city in a combination house of stage and screen.

Tomorrow the State has five vaudeville acts and the Hector Band on stage.

Vaude-Films

The Bowdoin, beginning tomorrow, offers a vaudeville and picture program of entertaining value. One of the hits is "Made on Broadway."

The associate film is a first-run "Destination Unknown," a theme that deals with a woman who found herself at the mercy of 12 men on a derelict ship. Another feature is "Hollywood Premier," a colortone revue. The last complete show at the Bowdoin now starts at 8 p. m.

New Shows Today

Gayety Theater

Starting tomorrow at the New Gayety screen will feature Joe E. Brown in "Elmer the Great," with Patricia Ellis, Frank McHugh and Preston Foster; and "Ann Carver's Profession," with Fay Wray, Gene Raymond and Claire Dodd. On the stage there will be five vaudeville acts.

ARLISS BRIGHTENS MET FILM

'Voltaire' Has Brilliance in Its Acting

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"Voltaire," the Metropolitan's new screen feature has George Arliss. That in itself is lure enough; the Old Master again is supreme in his art, again fashions a brilliant gem for the cinema. At his hands, the photoplay is lifted out of the costume and history ruts, to become perhaps the finest true-life characterization ever contributed to the movies. Arliss breathes the breath of life into his portrait of the famous cynic and wit, and injects so much of his own rapier-thrust genius that the almost purely biographic is made into fascinating drama.

* * *

Through the expertness of this same actor, Hollywood's grand old man, second only to Theodore Roberts in all these movie years, "Voltaire" has an underlying spirit of satire that lifts it to a high place among comedies of the season. Its humors are of the manner, more than of the spoken line. Arliss turns the era of periwigs into delightful fun. There is laughter in his wearing of an atrocious hat, merriment in his mimicking of the lords and ladies of Versailles. His handling of many of Voltaire's own bon mots has no comparison in all the talkies.

Arliss dwarfs the human pawns and the interwoven story. He is the hero, the tragedian, the comedian, just the Old Master. There are good points to the theme, though it goes draggy at times. It suffers as all historic plots suffer. Yet its warp and woof are strong, particularly so, if one can get a thrill out of smartly produced prelude to so important an event as the French Revolution.

It is an extremely difficult role. Voltaire is made a man of a thousand moods; and the study of Arliss, perfect in each to the last detail, is one of the rarest of audience pleasures.

There is a sadness in the thought that this is the last full length film of John G. Adolfi, taken before his time. Adolfi had few equals in pictures of this type, lavish and accurate, and stimulated by camera action.

On stage, superior merit is again the cue. "Town Topics," a revue into which are blended stellar acts, has much excellence. Sid Gary is a swell singer, and neat imitator of celebrities; Shaw and Lee are a couple of oldtime laughter-provokers. Rita White, a dance trio known as LaMarr, Kenny & Casey, and the nimble Lucille Page, are other stars. Mr. Sevitzky has another triumph with his orchestra in "Musical Impressions," and Mr. Martel is at the organ.

Opera, Halted by Rain, Will Come Later

By LEIGH HARBRIDGE

Boston mists may halt the opera, but the moisture doesn't dampen the ardor of Alfredo Salmaggi one whit. He thinks that in grand opera as elsewhere, it's a case of nothing venture, nothing have. And he was so determined today to try again, that he set August 21, and Braves Field the place, for the next time. This was the aftermath of the cancelation of last night's double bill of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," due to the threat of rain.

* * *

The impressario, whose summer season of grand opera in New York has been a miracle of the year through its success, says a producer has got to be a good gambler.

"I took my chances on the weather," he declared. "We had 22,000 Bostonians out for 'Aida' a month ago; in middle of the opera there came a terrific downpour. But not a person asked for money back. They had seen a good show, even if only a half opera. They were satisfied.

"I am not going to disappoint them, so we shall give his double bill, a week from Monday night."

Signor Salmaggi gave further details on his Boston Opera House season, to begin September 25, as announced exclusively on this page last Saturday.

His present plan is to scale the prices down to what he calls "movie rates." It will be a "dollar top," with the lowest tickets at 25 cents.

"That will bring the best in opera within every one's reach," he declared. "I look for a big season, for I know Boston. It is like home to me. And the people here want good music and will support a first-class company."

WILL JESSIE TILT SCALE OF JUSTICE BY OWN PLEA TO JURY?

Jessie Costello, the "Smiling Widow," will plead her own case before these 12 men on Monday. This dozen jurymen some time early in the week will decide her fate. Before the case is handed to them by Judge Frederick Fosdick, it has been decided to allow the prisoner to take her own case right to the men that hold her fate. Mrs. Costello hopes to so place her cause before the jury that the scales of justice will drop down on the side of freedom.

JESSIE BANS COUNSEL FROM JAIL TO PEN FINAL PLEA

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

takes the case under consideration. She was visited today by her three children, who were brought to the jail by their uncle, Andrew Fyfe, Jr.

It was a happy family reunion. Each of the youngsters had a gift that was proudly displayed to their mother. Anna Marie, 9, had a "Happy Hour Pait Boonk;" Jessie, 6, had a "Micky Mouse" book, and three-year-old Bobby proudly displayed a new pair of shoes to everyone at the jail.

Extra Precautions Taken to Guard Jury

Extra precautions were taken at the same time to guard the jury that is to decide the widow's fate from any possible molestation. Under orders from Judge Fosdick, two extra deputies were assigned to guard the jurors in the Hawthorne hotel, and they were instructed to use buses, instead of walking, in case they wished to go anywhere over the week-end.

Jessie Spends Hours Reading "Fan Mail"

After the children left the jail Mrs. Sostello spent several hours reading her "fan mail," which has been pouring in at ever-increasing volume. Most of the letters either praise her in fulsome terms or quote the scriptures in denouncing her.

All the evidence that will bring either doom or freedom to the widow is now in the hands of the jury; nothing more remains but the final arguments, the court's charge, and Jessie's personal protestation of innocence.

Decision on whether Jessie Costello is inocent or guilty of murdering her husband with a cyanide capsule is but a matter of a few days, a few days after next Monday when the case will be handed over to the 12 men for their deliberation.

Jessie Will Have Last Word in Battle

It is possible that Jessie's chance to make an impassioned plea for freedom before the jury box will not come until next Tuesday, but Monday or Tuesday, whenever it comes, Jessie will avail herself of her right and have the last word in her battle for life.

Chief of defense counsel, William Clarke will make a lawyer's summation to the jury, outlying the legal aspects of her case, call-focal points on which Jessie's life is contingent.

It is not likely that Jessie's trial for alleged murder will be decided in the test tubes of medical testimony. It is more probable that the 12 men who for the past four weeks have sat by and listened to a drawn-out trial of contradictory testimony and a recital of illicit love will make their decision on the character study of the widow indelibly printed in their minds, and the simple stories of every-day people who came to court and told what they knew.

"I'm Innocent," to Be Cry of Jessie

It is most probable that they will take into account that a woman is on trial for life, a mother of three children. Perhaps of this, Jessie will inject the greatest punch and climax into her trial when she stands before them, the last to be heard, and the last to leave in their minds a feminine voice, pleading:

"Innocence."

Jessie valedictory will be concise, but it will be fraught with a gripping and tense bit of drama.

In flowing black she will stand before them and say with all the drama of her soul:

"I did not murder my husband. I loved Bill Costello. I will always love Bill Costello. Gentlemen of the jury, believe me when I say unto you that I am an innocent woman."

Widow Bars Counsel From Work in Jail

In preparation of these few words, not to be recited according to the academics of dramatic elocution, Jessie today paced her double cell in heavy thought, intent on bringing into a paragraph or two of the most meaningful phrases she could cull from her anxiety for continued life.

She would accept no advice from her counsel on what she should say. She asked to be left alone over the week-end, that she might speak as Jessie Costello would, not in legal phraseology but in simple, every-day language, in words that the jury would know came from her heart.

While confident Jessie kept to her jail cell, her accuser, District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg also kept to his office. Both of them were thinking, the woman of her words for freedom, the man for a final argument of her guilt.

And while Jessie was anticipating acquittal, the prosecutor was anticipating conviction.

District Attorney Cregg, satisfied with the government's presentation of its charge of murder against the widow, will, in part, repeat his opening address to the jury, pointing to the many original statements he made and how they have been substantiated.

Cregg to Hurl Lie of Jessie at Jurors

He will tell the jury to pick their own motives for Jessie's alleged crime, offering them one of several which he will claim impelled the widow to murder her husband with a cyanide capsule.

He will tell the jury that the story of Edward J. McMahon, former Peabody police officer, who confessed to an illicit romance with the widow is the truth, despite th. sweeping denial made by Jessie to his charges.

He will say to them that Jessie lied about her relations with McMahon and that the man told the truth; that he would never have humiliated himself to such an extent as he did on the stand if he were not telling the truth; that he never would have embroiled himself in a murder trial to boast of wrong doing with the woman accused if he did not want to clear his own conscience and speak his mind out. The district attorney will picture again for the jury the God-fearing, recititudinous, devoted Bill Costello whose simple manner of living was irksome to his pleasure-loving, pleasure-wife.

District Attorney Cregg who opened his case to the jury by branding Jessie as an "extravagant, profane, vulgar and frivolous unfaithful" woman, will repeat this description of the widow and then with accusing finger, point to Jessie as the murderess of her husband.

The district attorney will believe that Jessie and Bill were a devoted and happy couple. He will tell them that Bill was an unsuspecting husband, a devoted father who lived for his family and his religion.

He will dispel the theory of suicide on the ground that Bill Costello was an ardent Catholic who would never traitor the code of his faith.

The prosecutor will deny accidental death on the ground that all medical testimony, practically, ridiculed such a theory.

Declared Body of Dead Man Shifted

He will deny that Bill Costello died of natural causes, because all the high-priced medical experts gave death by cyanide poison as the reason.

With such denials, the district attorney will tell the jury that there is only one solution to the case—that of murder.

He will say that Bill Costello, not dying by his own hand, was killed by the hand of another, that he died not where he was found in the hallways of the second floor of the Fay ave. bungalow, but that he was moved from his death bed to there.

And then finally, the pugnacious-looking, pugilistically-built, sandy-haired prosecutor, will ask the jury to find that Bill Costello's wife, Jessie, was responsible for his death and that she should be found guilty of first degre emurder.

Deliberation to Be Short, Says Widow

The final argument of the government, following the white-washed charge of guilt delivered in her defense by her counsel, will be ultimately climaxed by Jessie's plea of protested innocence and then the jury, receiving the court's charge will march from the courtroom into their deliberating room and decide for themselves.

Jessie is confident that the jury will not be out long. There are divergent opinions on his point.

However, by next week, Jessie Costello should know whether the "twelve good men and true," the jury of her peers, believes her story of innocence or the State's claim of murder.

Counsel Refuse Plea of Jessie to Testify

The pretty widow lost one point to her counsel when they flatly rejected her demand to return to the witness stand as a rebuttal witness. But out of it came their permission for her personal plea to the jury.

It was during a long recess after the State rested that Mrs. Costello insisted upon another appearance as a witness. Immediately after the recess, however, the defense opened rebuttal with the announcement that the widow would not be called.

The chief aim, it seemed from the very outset, was to explain the presence of capsules in the Costello home.

William H. Craig, a registered pharmacist at the Lawrence Bros. drug store at Peabody, was the first defence rebuttal witness. He was examined by Atty. Rafter.

Q—How long have you been a registered pharmacist? A—Since 1921.

Q—And how long have you been with Lawrence Bros.? A—Since 1931.

Q—You brought some records with you? A—Yes, sir.

The witness then displayed on the stand in front of him a file of prescriptions. There must have been 100 of them in the pile.

Atty. Rafter directed the witness to look up prescription number 146,180 and also prescription number 146,181.

Craig picked out the prescriptions and read from them the name of the drug called for. The first was a compound of amatal. He said it was a drug to induce sleep. He read further from the prescription that there were six capsules, one to be taken every six hours. He said the signature on the prescription blank was Dr. H. S. P., which he further identified as that of Dr. Pomeroy.

Q—You are familiar with Dr. Pomeroy's signature? A—Yes, sir. I know that those initials are those of Dr. Pomeroy and that is his prescription.

The witness was shown the original box which is said to have contained the capsules and he identified it by checking it with the prescription blank as to number and the directions for taking the drug.

Atty. Rafter then asked Craig if he would look up the other prescription, No. 146,181. The witness did.

Q—Will you tell us, Mr. Craig, as you look at that prescription blank what drug was prescribed? A—This prescription was for tablets of calcium lactate.

Court Stenogs in Record Session

Salem, Aug. 12—Exactly 620,456 words were recorded by court stenographers before the Costello testimony ended with the four-word statement of Judge Fosdick, "the evidence is closed."

Thousands more will be recorded Monday and Tuesday when the arguments of defense and prosecution, as well as the charge of Judge Fosdick, are due to be delivered.

The testimony itself filled 2068 pages of legal paper and somewhat of a record was established by Court stenographers John J. McKenney, James C. Carr and Bernard A. Powers, delivered the completed transcript less than an hour after testimony ended.

One Dead, 2 Hurt In Tiverton Crash

The injured were John Holland and Fred Bennett, both of this city.

Two Cent Postage Looms for Nation

Pasadena, Cal., Aug. 12—The volume of mail, which declined "until very recently," is now increasing steadily, Clinton B. Ellenberger, third assistant postmaster-general, declared here.

"It is our expectation that by next July it will be possible to return to a uniform 2-cent rate on all first-class mail without danger to the postoffice department's financial situation."

Who Killed Him?

Fire Capt. William J. Costello, for whose death his widow has been tried and is now waiting her day of judgment.

DEATH TOLL OF AUTO FALLS

Figures released by the governor's committee on State and highway safety today reveal that there was a decrease in the number of persons who lost their lives in auto fatalities in July as compared with the figures for the same month last year.

There were 74 deaths in July, 1932, as compared with a total of 66 in the past month. This decrease cuts down the highway toll this year to a figure only seven more than last year.

Figures show that police were active during the three-month campaign of the governor's committee, giving out a total of 21,253 tags to motorists. It was originally planned to suspend the campaign in August and resume in September, but many police departments are carrying on the safety work throughout the summer.

40 Cents an Hour Agreed In Trucking

Washington, Aug. 12—Tentative agreement on wages and hours for the trucking code being prepared by a committee of truck owners was ready for presentation to the National Recovery Administration.

Previously it had decided that all trucks should be included in the code that were not operated by business under other codes. The tentative decision calls for a basic pay of 40 cents an hour.

Tells Hatters They Kill Their Own Goose

Newark, N. J., Aug. 12 (AP)—Patrick McGovern, a Hatters' Union delegate, drove home a point on how to revive the hat industry at a union meeting here.

"I watched you fellows come in," he said. "And a lot of you were bareheaded. You ought to know better than that."

Hendrick for Brockton

Washington, Aug. 12 (INS)—Postmaster General Farley today named Arthur H. Hendrick to be acting postmaster at Brockton, Mass.

GIRL, 14, FOILS KIDNAPER

Andover, Aug. 12 (AP)—Police today searched gypsy camps for a man who allegedly attempted to kidnap RuthArgeris, of Boston, who has been living in Ballardvale with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Reed. The girl is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sharry Argeris of Roxbury.

The girl informed police that yesterday the man entered the Reed home and dragged her into the yard. There he attempted to bind her with a rope, but when she fought he lashed her. The approach of pedestrians caused him to leave hurriedly in an automobile, she said.

Quincy Pair Saved by Policeman

Two Quincy boys today can thank Patrolman Walter McKenna of the Quincy police, that they are alive. The officer aided them to reach shore after the home-made boat they borrowed overturned after being swept by a heavy tide into a culvert under the Southern Artery crossing over Black's creek.

The boys, Robert Gordon, 12, of Edgewood circle, and Douglas Mason, 9, of Putnam st., were fishing when the tide swept them into the culvert. They clung to the overturned boat until the officer came to their aid.

General Electric Increases Pay

Schenectady, N. Y., Aug. 12—The General Electric Company has announced a 10 per cent increase in pay for piece work, hourly work and salaried work up to the $2500 level. The increase applies to the Schenectady plant where between 11,000 and 12,000 persons are employed.

Together with a 5 per cent increase July 1, the cash [illegible] level is now 5 per cent higher than it was

JESSIE LEADS RIVAL CREGG, 3 TO 1, IN LETTER LEAGUE

By WILLIAM A. CONWAY

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Salem, Aug. 12—Jessie Costello would be free today if her fate were to be decided upon the amount of fan mail she and Dist.-Atty. Hugh A. Cregg have received since the trial started 21 days ago.

Jessie has a three to one lead over the district attorney, but he had the edge on her when distance is considered. Jessie has received letters of encouragement and vicious letters from nearly every state in the Union and Canada. Cregg has received almost a thousand fan letters from all parts of the United States and one from London, England.

PROPOSAL HINTED

Jessie's mail continued to pile up today. Her average of 200 a day was maintained before the last mail delivery was made. She broke the monotony of the week-end reading the mail and answering some of the letters she has received from personal friends.

One of the letters she received today contained the hint of a proposal. The letter came from Springfield, from a master of the ballet begins:

"My dearest Mrs. Costello:

"Very soon you will be free.

"In a few days you will kiss your children. I am praying for you. Be strong and happy. God bless you, dearest friend.

"I kiss your hand." A. B.

P. S.—When you will be free, please write to me.

McMAHON A "COWARD"

A letter from Taunton, from one of "your many sympathizers," offers Jessie a question to submit to her defense counsel.

"You have lots of sympathizers," the letter reads. "I hope you will win, have your lawyers ask to prosecution ho wyou could give your husband a capsul without he knowing it for it takes someone with a glass of water to swallow such a large thing as a capsul." God be with you. I hope you win over the coward that is trying to save his own hide."

A woman in Boston declares her belief in Jessie and states that she does not think a woman with Scotch blood running through her veins could commit such a crime.

"My Dear Mrs. Costello:

"I am writing to you because I have seen you personally, thinking you the most beautiful woman I ever cast eyes upon.

BELIEVES IN JESSIE

"Mrs. Costello, I am Scotch descent—knowing down deep in my heart that with Scotch blood running in your veins you never did the crime you're held for. Mrs. Costello I admire you for your womanly principle regarding your character on the McMahon cowardly love affair. Mrs. Costello you are to be respected for such a clean mind as to correct your character regarding his plea to save himself.

"Mrs. Costello I have a strong belief that you should be freed and now my dear Mrs. Costello as the end is drawing near be patient for your children's sake.

"May God bless you and your three children. From a woman admirer."

"My Dear Mrs. Costello it will hearten you to know that some of us women who are following your trial believe that you are innocent," another of the letters from "a friend in Boston," begins.

"I thought the third degree had been outlawed, but they seem to be giving it to you. They cannot break you down if you know where your help is. For the Lord on High is mightier than the noise of many waters—Yes, than the mighty waves of the sea, as the Psalmist said. And seemingly you are in the midst of a sea of vituperation, slander, curiosity, etc.

WISH YOU WERE HERE

"You have three lovely children, and I hope you will soon be reunited with them. You have been wonderful on the witness stand.

"I will not sign my name as you do not know me.

Pasted on the back of the card is a clipping from a newspaper referring to Jessie's testimony branding McMahon a "steel pigeon."

The mail also brought her more than a hundred copies of a poem published in a local newspaper.

The poem was written the day after McMahon made his appearance on the stand against Jessie.

"There may be some who never heard of Lincoln, Grant or Lee,
Of Caesar or Napoleon from the ancient Jamboree;
Perhaps they never heard of Alexander, brave and bold,
Bold, but they've heard about
McMahon, the cop,
The bird who kissed and told."

The poem went on for several more verses, but Jessie's correspondents thought the author was a little mild in his choice of words describing "the Kiss and Tell" Cop. They made deletions and supplied their own thoughts for Jessie's enjoyment.

Jessie never lacks for reading material and entertainment just so long as her "fans" continue to write to her "in care of the Salem jail."

JESSIE PENS LIFE PLEA

Bill's death has been shrouded with such mystery in the government's presentation of the case, that even I am bewildered by the whole affair.

I know it won't be an easy task for the jury to unravel the tangled skeins of the past four weeks. But this much I do know—that the jury will not convict me, they will not believe that I had anything to do with vicious murder.

Proud of Herself for Children's Sake

Some day, people will come to realize, too, that Jessie Costello was a persecuted woman but that she stood up under the humiliation like few women could. When all this has died down, and when I can once more return to my children, my father and brother, there will be one fine consolation out of this sorry mess. I will be proud of the way I acted through it all, proud of myself for my children's sake.

And if there may be some who will point me out, my children, at least, will be able to say, that their mother acted like every woman of noble courage and undaunted fear should have conducted herself.

Out of this sad mixup, out of this tragedy, Jessie Costello will emerge triumphant. I will always be able to carry my head high, I will be vindicated, mentally and personally, I will always be comforted by the knowledge that I might have said more to prova my innocence, but that I held my tongue in my cheek for the sake of my future.

Happy She Stood Up During Long Trial

I am not afraid of what the jury will return for me. As I have sat by and looked into their faces and watched the expressions of their feelings to my trial, I have been confident that in their manners there will be but one opinion—Jessie Costello is not guilty.

I have laughed and smiled throughout the ordeal and I am glad. I promised not to resort to a display of feminine hysterics, not break and crack under the harassing strain, not to cringe before the District Attorney's whip, not to shrink before the humiliating expose of a lying man; that I have done all these things is a satisfying feeling.

Dempsey's Fruit Men Strike on Pay Cut

Fresno, Calif., Aug. 12 (INS)—A wage of 17½ cents an hour is insufficient to live upon, according to fruit pickers on the ranch of Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, who were on strike today, claiming the rate was reduced from 25 cents.

ELEANOR IVES

At midnight there is an elopement . . . the scene is laid in the bedroom of Mr. Moneybanks' daughter, Irene. The situation develops when, although she had planned to elope with Ernest, at the last minute she elopes with George, and Ernest goes away with Phyllis, her friend. The elopement is discovered by all the house guests, who are routed from their slumbers when Irene screams . . .

The next morning it is discovered that Mr. Moneybanks is robbed of one hundred thousand dollars. The theft occurred during the excitement caused by the elopement. From then on the plot develops rapidly and many amazing situations are encountered, until finally, the situation is satisfactorily solved and the villain is sent to jail . . .

Returning From Honeymoon

MR. AND MRS. ALVAH CROCKER (Nancy Ladd) sailed for home this week after a two-month honeymoon in Europe. The young husband is to finish his course at the Harvard Business School this winter and they are planning to live in Cambridge. After landing on these shores, they are planning to visit Mrs. Crocker's parents, Dr. and Mrs. William Ladd in Milton for a while.

Polly Alford, one of the debutantes of this season, who had a tea given in her honor in June, a smart affair, was hostess at a long all-day picnic sailing among the islands of North Haven this week . . . some of the guests included the Ellerton James' boys, Susan Lee, Andrew J. Peters' sons and Robert Lowell.

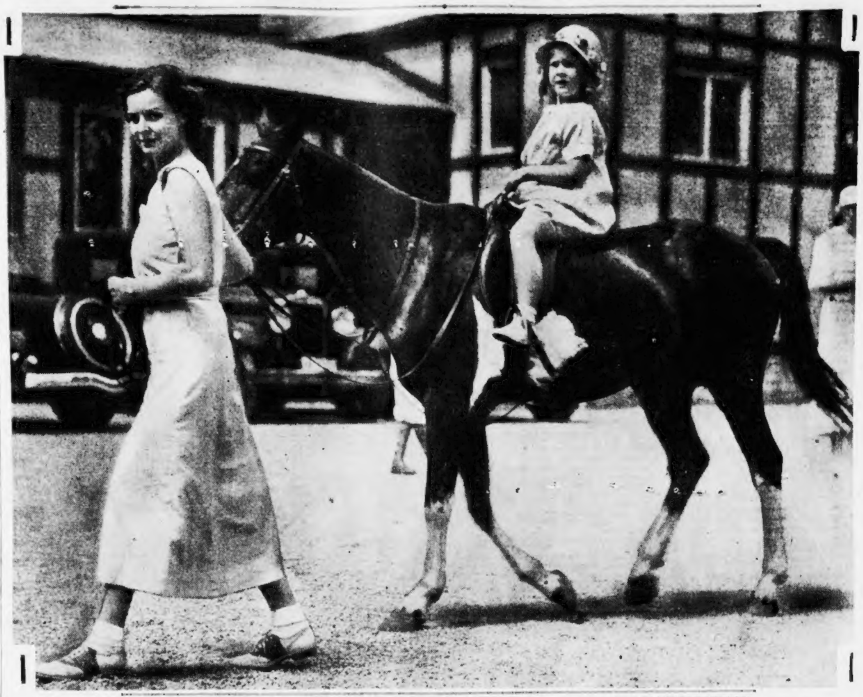
MISS KATHERINE HOWARD BRIDE TODAY OF CHARLES TOWNSEND

SOCIETY GIRL INSTRUCTS -:- NORTH SHORE FUTURE DEBS



ANN SORTWELL — VIRGINIA CHASE

PREFERRING TO OPERATE a riding academy on the North Shore to leading the busy social life of a debutante, Miss Ann Sortwell spends many busy hours instructing the future debutantes in the art of riding. The Boston American's society cameraman caught Ann leading a pony about to the enjoyment of little Virginia Chase. Miss Sortwell is most popular with the young folk on the North Shore. Her father is Mr. Peter Sortwell, gentleman jockey at the Myopia Hunt Club. The Sortwells are widely known in horse show circles. (Boston American Photo.)

Church Bridal for Newport Favorite

THE Berkeley Memorial Chapel of St. Columba's Church in Newport, R. I., is the scene today of a large and picturesque wedding, uniting two families prominent in the social world when Miss Katherine Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Howard of Newport, formerly of Boston, becomes the bride of Mr. Charles Townsend, son of Dr. Charles Wendell Townsend of Ipswich, at a 4 o'clock ceremony at which the Most Rev. James DeWolfe Perry, bishop of the Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Clifford Chadwick, rector of Berkeley Memorial Chapel, officiate. Mr. Howard gives his daughter in marriage.

The bridal party pass through a lane of gladioli of brilliant hues going down the aisle lined with standards of gladioli shading from pale yellow in the front of the church to coral in the rear. The chancel decorations are white with white garlands on either side. The decorations were planned by Miss Helena Sturtevant, an aunt of the bride.

Gardenia Satin

The bride is wearing a gown of gardenia satin, with a full fan train of tulle ruffles to match, draped low from the skirt in Spanish style. The gown has a draped bodice and long tight sleeves of tulle, with a melon puff at the shoulder. The illusion veil is draped from a pearl cap and caught with orange blossoms that adorned the wedding veils of the bride's grandmother and mother.

The bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Wendell Taber of Boston, is serving as matron of honor. She is wearing a gown of gardenia satin with a ruffled back treatment of tulle forming a slight train, and a short cap sleeve of ruffles. Her large hat of matching tulle has a pleated band of turquoise satin as its only trimming. She is carrying a nosegay of shaded pink sweetpeas.

The bride is being attended by six bridesmaids dressed alike in gardenia satin with deep hems of tulle ruffles with bows of turquoise satin, caught with pink, [illegible] primroses. The sleeves are full melon puffs of tulle ruffles. In place of flowers they are carrying melon shaped puffs of the same tulle ruffles. The bridesmaids are Mrs. Thomas Clark Howard of New York, Mrs. John Babcock Howard of Boston, Mrs. Horace Binney, Jr., of Providence Miss Virginia Raeburn of New York, Miss Isabella Lee of Boston and Miss Jane Franklin of Buffalo.

Flower Girls

The two little flower girls, the Misses Sally and Mary Wheatland of Bangor, Me., are wearing Kate Greenaway frocks of turquoise satin and tulle, with wreaths of sweet peas in their hair and baskets brimming with baby's breath and sweet peas.

Mr. Carleton Hunneman of Boston is serving as best man, and the ushers are Clement C. Sawtell of Cambridge, William E. Wells of New York, Alfred W. Douglas of Boston, Nathaniel A. Orr of North Carolina, Edmond B. Sawtell of Bangor, Maine, the three brothers of the bride, Henry S. Howard of California, Thomas C. Howard of New York and John B. Howard of Boston.

Following the ceremony the wedding reception takes place in the garden of Marinden, the estate of the Misses Sturtevant, on Second Beach Road in Newport. The bridal party receives against a background of dark foliage with the ocean beyond.

The bridal couple will be at home, after the first of October, in Boston.

The bride has been a prominent member of Newport society for several years. She was graduated from the Winsor School in Boston and is a member of the Boston Junior League.

New Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

ALREADY WE ARE GETTING glimpses of the autumn mode in furs, the cool mornings and cooler evenings suggest warm garments and good looking tweeds are showing here, there and everywhere!

Miss Lucile Swift, summering with her parents, the George Swifts of Manchester, has appeared with touches of fur on her smart gowns. She attended a tea the other evening in a charming tailored print of black, red and white figured, long sleeves and the modish three-quarter skirt length, her sporty straw hat slightly brimmed with a coy bow in the front adds a modish touch and a cape of white fox fur completes the chic outfit.

Mrs. William Cox of Cohasset is always daintily garbed, her new beige print looking very svelt and chic on her.

Miss Nancy Newell, summering at Wianno, is an exceptionally well dressed sub-deb. She is tall and dark with curly brown hair peeping from under her natty sport hat banded in brown and matching the brown and white belt she wears with her white linen sport frock.

Miss Polly Clements is another well dressed young lady summering at Wianno. Her sky blue and white ensemble nicely offset by a wide brimmed leghorn, most becoming to her.

Mrs. Horace Drinkwater of Cohasset is an exceedingly well dressed matron. Her snappy black and white morning print is one of her best looking ensembles—with it she wears a modish sailor hat and carries white accessories, chic and striking.

Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Jr., is such an attractive young lady, her blonde good looks and slender figure lend themselves admirably to the charming frocks this young lady wears. White is her favorite color and the dainty ruffled organdy, floor length and short puffy sleeves, is especially chic. Then too in sport clothes she appears exceptionally well, again favoring white. She wears a neatly fitted little white linen rig with full sleeves on the coat and tight fitting waist line.

Do you know you can buy a new brick home for $5,495. Today's values will never be equaled. To buy a home today is an investment in life, happiness and profit for the future. See today's classified columns for details on today's opportunities.

Mrs. Daniel Lynch Heads Group Sponsoring Bridge Benefit

A CONTRACT bridge party and whist, will be held Friday, August 18, at Pemberton Inn, Hull, under the direction of the Allerton and Bayside section group, who are interested in raising their quota for that well known and worthy charity, Vacation House, at Sunset Point. With so many events being planned, before the large dansant, which will terminate the activities for the fund, to carry on the work for these sickly children (which takes place early in September), the South Shore is socially a busy place.

Mrs. W. T. A. Fitzgerald

Mrs. Daniel Lynch of Bayside is chairman of the committee, assisted by Mrs. Frank Sullivan and Mrs. James Hey. They have obtained a large number of unusual prizes, and many people from the city and outside sections are expected to attend. The committee comprises a prominent list of charitable women, including Mrs. Bernard Killion, Mrs. Henry Tougas, Mrs. William Harty, Mrs. T. Robert Sullivan, Mrs. William Dolan, Mrs. W. T. A. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Herbert Connelly, Mrs. Frank Daley, Mrs. John W. Allston, Mrs. Frederick Crosby, Mrs. Edward Richardson, Mrs. John Breslin, Mrs. George Oberlander, Mrs. Paul Jakmaugh, wife of Dr. Paul Jakmaugh, well known physician of South Boston; Mrs. James Shannon, Mrs. John Donahue, Mrs. William Slattery, Mrs. Harry P. Cahill, Mrs. Joseph Ford, Mrs. Thomas Hayden and Mrs. Charles Donahue. Boats for this party will leave Boston at 1:15 p. m. and 2 p. m.

Many members of the North Shore social set are on this board, including Mrs. William H. Coolidge, Jr., Mrs. Albert M. Creighton, Mrs. Augustus F. Goodwin, Mrs. Charles F. Ropes, Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell, Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., and Mrs. Joseph W. Woods.

MR. AND MRS. VALENTINE HOLLINGSWORTH of Marlborough st. are at Prospect pl., Marblehead, for the summer.

BOOKS---And a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

I

I did not ask to come. The feast was spread,
And I was bidden to this lavish board.
Around me sat a beggar and a lord,
A lonely girl, and Cardinals in red.
"Why are we here? at last I must have said,
For someone answered, "Each has asked that word,
Yet no one knows." Then the bright wine was poured,
Mixed with the bitter flavor of the bread.

We ate and drank, and swiftly time rolled on.
I seized the grapes—and crumbs; but friends went out
Before I finished. Others took their places.
We laughed, and wept by turns. Now many are gone.
The first hours were a revel and a rout,
But toward the end we sat with solemn faces.

II

For well we knew the candles would expire,
The cloth be stained with crimson, and the light
Go out at last, to leave us in the night,
Alone and vanquished in our full desire.
We warmed our hands before the goodly fire,
We laughed and sang around the table white,
Where lilies lifted their tapers bright
For our sad eyes to notice and admire.

The end was near; the feasting would be done,
And every guest would vanish from the board,
While seneschals regarded our pale faces.
Then through the darkened doorway, one by one,
We all would pass, lover and girl and lord,
And other guests would fill our empty places.

The Onlooker was speaking: "In all the confusion of the world today, in all the readjustments that are taking place, one grows more confused, trying to do one's bit in lending aid to others less fortunate than we.

"I think it was Andrew Carnegie who said that philanthropy, like any other science, was something that had to be studied. It does not do to work blindly and, we might put it, ignorantly, in the beautiful business of assisting our fellow mortals. The worthy should be given every help we can offer; but aren't there plenty of unworthy ones who are taking advantage of this period of upheaval to get what they can without lifting a finger to help themselves?"

We were certain that there were; but hadn't it always been so? There couldn't very well be worthy people, unless there were also unworthy ones; so why worry particularly about that?

"I became interested once," said the Onlooker, "in prisons and prisoners, and I went up to one of those grim institutions to investigate conditions, and to do what I could for some of the inmates when they won their freedom.

"A certain young fellow of good education seemed very worth while to me. He had been convicted of some trifling crime. When he came to see me, I got a friend of mine—a publisher—to create a job for him. He was to deliver copy to the printer, at a wage of $15 a week—not, one thought, a bad job to get just now. But do you know, the fellow spurned so cheap an offer—said he couldn't think of working for so little, and in such a subordinate position. The publisher politely showed him the exit.

"But, three or four days later this proud chap was seen by the publisher making elaborate purchases, on a charge account which he had somehow managed to open, in a shop where the publisher was a frequent customer. He fled when he recognized his recent patron. That is the last ever seen or heard of him."

"Of course, there are such cases," we said; "deplorable indeed. But one shouldn't lose faith in humanity because of them."

"No, of course not. Years ago I had an experience exactly the reverse. A man in Sing Sing won my regard. He was the victim of circumstances, and I discovered that he wrote exceedingly well. He served a long term, and then came to me, as an editor, with a MS. It was a few days before Christmas when he stepped into my office out of the snow. I couldn't use his article but I knew another editor who I was certain would take it. But before he left with a letter of introduction, I asked him where he was spending the holidays. He said he wanted to go to his married son's, but hadn't the money to get there. It was somewhere over in New Jersey.

"My own bags were packed and I was about to start on a joyful house-party; so I told him my own Christmas would be a happier one if he would take ten dollars from me, and return it when he could.

"Well, right after Christmas he came in, beaming, and gave me back the money, for he had sold his little article for twenty-five dollars. I have never seen him since, for he went to Chicago and landed a good job; but every Christmas he sends me a card.

"There's the other side. A better story, you'll admit, than the one I first told you. So there must be many honest men who are confined behind prison walls. I've come to the conclusion that it's better to try to help everyone. You'll have your disappointments, naturally; but when you strike one decent fellow, he atones for all the dishonest ones who disturb us by their ingratitude. It's a mixed up world, at best; but it's interesting, whatever else we say about it."

DOCTOR SAYS DISHWASHING IS BENEFICIAL TO THE HANDS; SOAP MUST BE GOOD

If Sudsing Water Is Warm and Rinse Water Hot, Dishes Are Clean and Hands Helped

By Therese Deschamps

NO DOUBT this will be hailed as good news by some, but bad news by others. DISHWASHING CAN BE BENEFICIAL TO THE HANDS! So says an eminent doctor who unlike many of his colleagues is really interested in making women beautiful, and feels that there is much to be done in teaching women how to do the homely, necessary tasks in a way that can be helpful rather than disfiguring.

And this is the way that he suggests we go about it. (Of course, if you are one of the fortunates who own electric dishwashers, this information will be lost.)

Instead of having the dishwater so hot that it can parboil your hands—as so many women think is essential—have it just comfortably warm. Use a good soap as you use on your face or for your bath.

Hands Feel It

After all, it isn't the dishes that will feel the difference between good and inferior soap. It is your hands. And you owe it to them. Then rinse the dishes in very hot water, as hot as possible. You need not touch them then and the water can be next to boiling.

Furthermore, he says that the grease and fats that collect in the dishwater during the process are really good for the hands. Just so long as they can be washed off well with warm water and a good soap suds.

When the dishes are done, rinse the hands well, dry them thoroughly and rub into them some good hand lotion or nourishing cream. Work the cream in around the nails especially. Then wipe off the excess. It is imperative that the cuticle not be allowed to dry out, for this can completely ruin the appearance of one's manicure.

Wear Gloves

Another helpful bit that this same doctor suggests is the wearing of gloves. If the hands must be in water longer than you know is beneficial, then wear rubber gloves by all means. For the dusting and cleaning, wear cotton gloves if you like. Otherwise be sure to wash the hands well and cream them after each wearing.

Wearing gloves to bed after the hands have been generously smeared with cream, is another suggestion. It will fill out any scrawniness that might be annoying you. Exercise will assist in keeping hands firm, graceful, and youthful. Stretching the fingers shaking the hands briskly from the wrists until they tingle, anything of that sort is good.

And as for stains, just dig the fingers into the pulp of a lemon. This will usually remove the ordinary fruit or vegetable stains.

Any questions about creams or lotions for the hands will be answered gladly. Please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request. Address Therese Deschamps, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. This column is continued in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Beauty Queries and Answers

To Fatten Thighs

Question—would you kindly advise a massage or special exercise to fatten the calf and thighs of my legs? If you have such a tried and true one will you pass it along to me, please?—Mrs. A. DeB., East Boston.

Answer—Cocoa butter or lanoline massaged into the thigh should prove helpful. Use plenty of it, twice a day or so. Leave it on all night if you can. The same exercises that would take fat off the thighs should put it on those that are too thin. Exercise normalizes the muscles. We are sending you a set of exercises for the lower legs and thighs. Thank you for the stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dry Hair

Question: My hair is extremely dry as a result of being out in the sun. What do you recommend?—MISS A. P., Belmont.

Answer: Hot oil shampoos are excellent for bringing dry hair back to normal. Another thing that is helpful is to rub a bit of oil or brilliantine over the hair just before going out into the sun. You must not use much, of course, but enough to protect the hair for a reasonable amount of time.

Plucking Brows

Question: I feel that I must pluck my eyebrows, but I dread it each time because it is really rather painful. Others whom I know do not find it so. Is there anything that I can do to make it easier.—MISS R. B., Wakefield.

Answer: White vaseline or any oily cream is good to rub over the eyebrows before plucking them. Then hold the flesh tightly as you pluck them. Both these tricks are helpful in making the process more pleasant.

Whiteheads

Question: I have been troubled with a number of whiteheads on my nose. What will remove them? Do you think it dangerous for me to press them out?—MRS. D. C., Auburndale.

Answer: Whiteheads are blind and therefore cannot be removed by any of the preparations which are recommended for blackheads. It is best to go to a beauty expert and have them removed. There is the possibility that if you attempt to do them yourself, you may infect the neighboring pores.

Icing

3 tbsps. confectioner's sugar
1 tbsp. butter
½ tsp. lemon juice
½ cup crushed pineapple
½ cup marshmallows, cut up.

Satin Fabric Hats That Snap On

IF YOU want a new lease on life, indulge in something frivolous preferably a new hat. You'll do well to select one of satin elastic fabric, for this and velvet are the materials for fall. One magical twist and these sophisticated "elastic" hats snap into your own head-size, as if cut for you. They have great chic.

Some of the new hats take nerve—all of them take dash to wear. But you needn't be inveigled into something ridiculous because your soul yearns for something new. It is possible to choose a hat with discreet manifestations of the new highs, lows, Mexican, Spanish, Chinese, and Roman gladiator influences in millinery fashion at the moment.

You're safe to stick to hats in dark jewel tones. In velvet and satin these colors are divine. And so are brown and black. Match your hat with a capelet, gloves, belt, purse, or perhaps a muff. You'll discover that the costumes that look best are really simple and tailored, and subtly complemented by strongly accented accessories.

If you really want to create a stir, bring down that old velvet beret packed away in the attic for years. Pull it sharply over one eye, puff it up slightly in the back, add a feather ornament, and go to tea with the mysterious glint in your eye that comes from "putting one over" on your friends. The berets you go out and buy in the shops have newer ideas, of course—peek-a-boo cutouts (illustrated), square fronts, stitching, modern trimmings.

The African influence has made itself felt too. Suggesting the headdresses worn by pigmie head-hunters is the two-way stretch satin in black and white stripes, also shown.

Then there are demure lady-like models. Look at that quaint sun-bonnet of black velvet in the sketch. Because of its youthfulness, it would take a very chic woman to give it allure.

Your hair must be cut short, and curled tightly in the day-time for these new hats. In the evening, you may be as amusing, mid-Victorian or sleek with it as you please. The feather boats, angel wings, high sleeves and sheath-like silhouettes cry out for originality.

How to Treat Poison Ivy Attack

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

I RECENTLY VISITED a country home where an infant had come in contact with poison ivy. The child suffered untold agony and for many days his life was in peril.

Dr. Copeland

In adults the effect of poison ivy is to produce an annoying but mild disease. But it is always serious when it afflicts infants and young children. The danger is increased when the young victim is in a poor state of health, weakly, or undernourished, if you have ever suffered from ivy poisoning you can readily appreciate the discomfort and annoyance it produces.

This poisoning is an irritation of the skin caused by a substance found in certain plants and trees. These belong to the "Rhus group." The most common are the poison ivy, poison oak and poison sumac.

There are individuals who suffer from this distressing ailment apparently without actual contact with the plant. All they need do is be in the vicinity of the plant. The sap or pollen of the plant can be carried to the sensitive individual by the wind or by contact with clothing, tools, insects and other objects that have touched the poisonous plant.

Lots of persons are immune and, even though they pick the poison ivy plant, do not contract the disease. If you are sensitive to this plant, make every effort to avoid it and all objects that have been in contact with it.

If you unintentionally touch the plant, I would advise that you immediately take a warm bath and scrub with an alkaline soap. Then sponge the body with alcohol. Some find gasoline beneficial. This is well to remember as it is sometimes difficult to obtain alcohol.

Soothing lotions, such as calamine and zinc lotion are extremely helpful in lessening the effects of poison ivy. Hyposulphite of soda solution is helpful in stopping the itching.

The blisters which form may be broken with a sterile needle and a clean dressing kept over the wound. The lotion I have mentioned will form a crust. This should be removed with olive oil or cottonseed oil, but never with water.

If the inflammation persists and the pain is severe, call your physician. As in the case I mentioned, the advice of a physician is especially necessary when the sufferer is an infant or young child.

Girl Should Not Give Him Money, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 21 and have been going with a certain man for six months. He is seven years older than I. He hasn't worked any since I met him. I have been helping him, even paying his board and giving him extra money. The trouble is that he is very stubborn, and if he doesn't have his way he will quarrel with me. I love him very much and get broken-hearted when he doesn't speak to me. I cry a great deal. He begs me not to leave him. He is lovely to me sometimes.

JUST-A-GIRL.

Dear Girl—I'm afraid that this young man is not worthy of you. To help a friend over a tight place is all right sometimes, but for a young, able-bodied man of 27 to take money from a girl continually, and allow her to pay his board, is incomprehensible. I hope you'll stop doing this.

She Is Three Years Older

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am keeping company with a young man 23 years old, and I am 26. He loves me very much and I him, but that difference in ages bothers him. I try not to let it bother me, but I'm afraid that after marriage it will be more important. Another thing, I imagine that people will talk about me for going with a younger fellow. I am seriously thinking of giving him up for this reason.

MARY JANE.

Dear Mary Jane—Don't make yourself unhappy scaring up trouble. The difference of ages of which you speak is nothing—absolutely nothing. Some of the most successful marriages are where the wife is a few years older than the husband. Notably that of Disraeli, one of Queen Victoria's prime ministers.

The Boy Friend Is Her First Cousin

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one and take care of some children. When my day off comes around I go to see my aunt. She has a son and a daughter. The boy, who is 24 and my first cousin, thinks he loves me, and always asks me to go out with him. I have friends who have seen us together and say it is not proper to go around with a cousin and that one should never marry so close a relative.

PUZZLED

Dear Puzzled: This is not a question for a layman to decide. Sometimes first cousins marry and have perfectly normal children, and everything goes well. Again, the consequences are unfortunate. It seems to me that if you and your cousin seriously consider marrying, the best person to consult is your family doctor.

A Soldier's Unhappy Experience

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The young lady I loved and hoped to marry has married another. I have tried to forget her, but it seems impossible. I wish her all the happiness in the world, but it breaks my heart to see someone else enjoying her companionship and a home with her. They have made their home near where I live with my parents. I have often thought of moving away, as father and mother do not need my support, but it is difficult to leave them, now that they are so far advanced in years.

You will probably tell me I should be more sensible. Well, I have tried to forget, but no success. I was wounded in the war and my face is disfigured, which is a handicap.

DISCOURAGED.

Dear Discouraged—You must think me very unsympathetic if you could imagine me telling a man who has had your experience to be "more sensible." You've not only been sensible, but heroic, in considering the happiness of your aged parents, and remaining with them, when seeing the girl you love the wife of another is like pressure on a bruise. Some girl is missing a fine husband in you. Have you consulted a competent physician in regard to plastic surgery, and what it might be able to do for your face?

Party to Announce Engagement

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am to be engaged next month and I would appreciate it if you will please tell me how to go about my engagement announcement. I am to have a dinner for close relatives and I want to have a party for friends after the dinner. We are both very popular and have many friends, too many to invite all to the party, but we would like them to know of our engagement.

U.

Your plans for announcing your engagement are perfect, so far. . . the announcement-dinner for your close relatives, and the more general party for your close friends. Then the perfect way of making the announcement to your other friends is for you and your fiance to write notes, telling of your engagement, to those friends who are not to be invited to the party. This is all that you need to do. The notes should be written so that they arrive a day or so before this date on which you are having the announcement parties.

Without Escorts

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please advise me if it is considered improper for two young ladies, dressed formally, to go out in the evening without escorts?

H.

No, this is not improper. It often is done, has to be done under certain circumstances, and the circumstances demand a very definite dignity.

"Knave's Girl"

Joan Clayton

"How lovely you're looking," said the older girl but Patricia caught the quick glance she cast at the door.

"Are you expecting a cusomer, Leda?"

"Of course not, silly. Even if I were it wouldn't matter when I haven't seen you for months. Sit down and tell me about it." After she had admired the scarf, the shoes, the simply stunning hat, Leda added casually, "Phil said he might come in about four. Would you like me to send to the drug store for tea? You and I have oceans of time."

HER STEPSISTERS

"How are Teresa and Ellen?" Patricia must ask. She felt lonely now for her little stepsisters. She said wistfully, "I suppose you see them often."

"Not often," replied Leda indifferently. "The kids are all right though. Since you have been sending money your stepmother has hired a maid and is talking about sending them to private schools. Can you beat it!"

"I'd like to manage a visit."

"I wouldn't do that," said Leda, to Patricia's secret disappointment. The older girl's face was grave. "I wouldn't think of it," she said definitely.

"Why not?"

"Bill McGee hasn't forgotten you, not by a long shot," replied Leda promptly.

"I'm not afraid of Bill," announced Patricia. She admitted a shade anxiously, "Of course I would hate to have him locate me, or for that matter, have anyone else I used to know locate me—except you," she ended loyally. She said, "I still don't understand how you were so sure that I had taken a job with Julian Haverholt."

Leda smiled rather oddly. That smile hurt Patricia in an indefinable, queer, little way. Leda pushed back her bleached, corn-colored hair and said:

"I happened to read a newspaper article about a bridge tournament. The winners were Julian and Patricia Haverholt. It was then that I was certain."

Patricia's face turned red.

"That doesn't mean anything," she faltered. "Julian was thinking of the looks of the thing, of my reputation. He thought then, so did I, that it might be better for me to be introduced as his niece, so that I could have the protection of his name, so that people wouldn't talk. I've wished lots of times I hadn't. It was a silly thing to do."

"Not so silly."

"Awfully silly. It—our arrangement isn't what you think think it is," said Patricia awkwardly, forging stubbornly ahead. "It's entrely business. We like each other. That's all it's ever been."

"Goodbye, Leda."

"Goodbye, honey. Watch out for Bill McGee. If I hear anything definite I'll drop you a note if you want me to."

"I do. Thanks a lot."

The days drifted by. Clark was still in the country. If he had returned to town, surely he would have telephoned. Or had he telephoned and had Haverholt told some lie? What possible difference could it make? She was never going to see him again. She did, of course.

They dropped by the house at the end of the week, Clark, Marthe, Phil Gove, dressed for dancing, demanding that Patricia and Julian join them. Whose idea was it? Clark's or Marthe's? Had Clark wanted to come because of her? Or had Marthe wanted to come because of Julian? How mixed-up and crazy everything was!

"We had planned to play bridge," Patricia advised the eager, bright-eyed group—but weakly. She said, "I'm not dressed."

"We'll wait," argued Clark, looking at her in the thrilling delightful way he had. "You've done nothing but play bridge all week. I know you two."

HATES DANCING

"I hate dancing," announced Julian. "I won't be dragged in on any such expedition. Patricia may do as she pleases."

Very suddenly Patricia decided to go. Avoiding Julian's eye she said she would. One week had made her sick of wisdom. While Haverholt rang for drinks she flew upstairs to dress. Blue, Clark liked blue. The printed chiffon was perfect.

As she drifted downstairs, conscious of the effect of deep blue with her smooth skin and blazing hair, conscious above all of Clark's eyes she wondered if this could be wrong. It did not seem wrong.

"I'm glad you decided to come," was all Clark said. It was enough. Her cup overflowed.

"Well, are we ready?" asked Julian briskly. "I hope you folks will take me as I am. I decline to dress on a night like this."

"I thought you weren't going," said Patricia, surprised.

"I discovered in your absence that the expedition was moving on the Sky High club. I'm curious about that place."

Patricia turned white. Clark saw her tremble. Marthe saw, too. The girl felt eyes staring, staring.

Patricia heard herself say what she had never meant to say.

"I'll go."

BILL McGEE

The Sky High Club was on a mean, quiet little street, given over in daytimes to business. The building was formidable, a ten-story loft building, dark now. A man who had been strolling up and down the sidewalk came up alertly as their car stopped. Clark showed his card. A door was unlocked. The five streamed into a dimly lighted, bare, uncarpeted hall.

"I'm thrilled," whispered Marthe. "Isn't it thrilling?"

They were lifted to the roof in a freight elevator. Marthe liked that too. Clark and Phil were frankly uncomfortable. Julia was curious. He admired this approach, rather. Good stuff for people who lived on Park Avenue. It made them feel that they were slumming. They reached the roof. Julian was not surprised by the club. The others were. The club was all that its name had indicated. Sky High. It was luxurious, it was smart, it was modern, it was done in silver gray. There was a gleaming onyx bar. It was just another night club.

The music sobbed to a close and they started for a door that led to the cool of the roof. Three men were coming in from the hall; three men were dropping their hats and coats; three men were preparing to stop at the bar.

Patricia saw only one. That one was Bill McGee.

She darted through the open door to the roof. Clark, bewildered, followed swiftly. What was wrong? What had happened? The girl had backed against the edge of the roof, her eyes terrified in an ashen face.

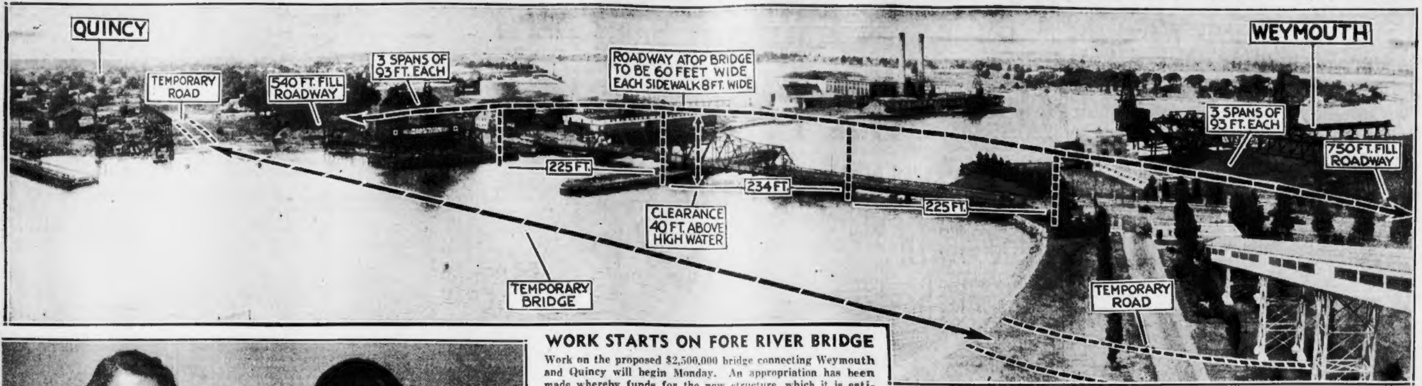
START NEW FORE RIVER BRIDGE ~ GLOUCESTER ART WEEK



WORK STARTS ON FORE RIVER BRIDGE

Work on the proposed $2,500,000 bridge connecting Weymouth and Quincy will begin Monday. An appropriation has been made whereby funds for the new structure, which it is estimated will take two years to complete, are made available. The new bridge, one-half mile long, 76 feet wide, and with a rise from the ground of 40 feet, will take the place of the old bridge, which is of wood, narrow and with steel car tracks running through the center of it. A temporary bridge will be built about 400 yards upstream from the present site. The diagram gives you excellent idea of how large the new span will be—and its comparasion with the old bridge. The height of new bridge will eliminate most of the draw bridge work—as it will take care of most types of craft that go that way.

Sports Parade

The Parade Starts Own News Service With Straight Stuff ↕ All the News, Authentic at That, in Advance

By AUSTEN LAKE

Today the Parade is launching its own news service to fill a big vacuum among the Boston newspapers. This is no run-of-the mill news service like the AP, INS or UP, mind you, but one that will give you the NEWS before it happens and scoop even the people who are concerned, an advance news service for which our slogan is "We make the news." Now, for example take a sample item like this:

Post Office Sq., Sept. 25—George Owen, former Harvard all round star and Bruins defence man, announced today that he would retire from competitive hockey and devote his time to his growing bond business.

Now, even Mr. Owen does not know at the minute that he is going to retire. And, of course, if he wants to be bullheaded about it, he may insist on not retiring, in which case some dark night he will be coming home from a hockey game next winter and get accidentally hurt, nothing serious of course, but painful like being bumped on the back of his skull with a tire iron. Just as a lesson. Because the Parade's advance service is always right, see! Or else. So, if Mr. Owen is smart and wants to stay regular he will announce his retirement on September 25.

The Parade intends to do right by its members and the service charge is being scaled down to a mere 50 per cent of what each member makes. There's money for us both, see! Because the more you make the more we make. And with a direct Parade wire, you'll make plenty. Pul-en-tee! Now look! here's a fresh news item that the AP or INS might flash, if they know about it.

North Station, Aug. 12—Bill Ames, matchmaker of the Boston Garden, this afternoon is conferring with Lou Brouillard, who recently won the world's middleweight title from Ben Jeby. Both Ames and Brouillard refused to divulge the purpose of the meeting.

Well, okay! That's where we come in. We give our members an exclusive on what happened in that meeting, which is behind closed doors and secret, see! How do we find out? Saa-ay! Lou or Billy have no use for a broken leg or a couple of smashed ribs, have they? So when we tell you that Ames is offering Lou a series of matches with the leading middleweights of the country, to fight once a month in New York and Boston for 40 p. c. of the gate as part of the N. Y.-Boston Garden's new working agreement to corner all the champions in the East, WE KNOW, bu leeve us!

Dinny McNamara to Join B. C. Football Staff

Now we're friends . . . so far, see! So we're giving you the dope straight, because we don't want to have to call on you again, when we might not be so friendly. Now here, for instance, is an item.

University Heights, Aug. 31—The Rev. Fr. Cummings, S. J., new moderator of athletics at Boston College announced today that John "Dinny" McNamara, former assistant backfield coach under Maj. Cavanaugh at Fordham, will join the football coaching staff as assistant to Joe McKenney.

Well, maybe McKenney and B. C. don't need McNamara as backfield coach, see! They might figure that McKenney being a backfield man himself is perfectly able to take care of that department. But WE SAY that McNamara is going to join the football staff. And the Parade Service is always a hunnert per cent right. So McNamara will be backfield coach, if Fr. Cummings doesn't want a pineapple planted under his chapel seat some fine morning or McKenney doesn't want some cyanide loose in his pants.

Or this:

Hartford, Aug. 14—Bobby Brown, young Braves pitcher whose right arm has been suffering from a blight all season, is going to receive an acid test today by pitching for the Braves in an exhibition game against the local club. Manager McKechnie of the Braves states that the result of Brown's showing will go far toward determining the Braves' position in the National League standing during the race down the stretch.

So what? Why, a committee of the boys called in at the Victoria Hotel, where McKechnie lives, last night and get him into private conference, all smooth and polite, see! Chiseler Patrone sits close to him on the sofa, smiling right up into Bill's kisser and nudging something hard against his side. It is in his pocket, of course, because we got ethics and never pull our roscoes unless we are in a jam, see! So when Sam the Bite, our finger man, says, "What about it?" Bill turns a little pale and replies, "O, certainly boys. As a matter of fact I intended to pitch Brown on Monday, just to see what he has. I had decided on that."

So Chiseler, Sam and me grin and tell Bill, "Well, we'll be in the stands, just in case," and then we scram. So you see the Parade's Advance Service is airtight.

Legislature to Reduce Boxing Club Licences to $250

Maybe we don't need to go any further, because by this time, as a smart newspaper publisher, you are convinced. But just in case, because we don't want to have to remind you later, and sand in the press gears don't make them run any better or you don't want any wheels coming off your delivery trucks, we will show you a little more. Like this:

Beacon Hill, Nov. 19—The State Legislature today passed a bill on recommendation of the boxing commission, to reduce the boxing club license fee from $800 to $250, which presages the return of the small promoter and bargain rate boxing shows during the coming winter.

Now that's a hard nut, eh? But we made it hard on purpose, because even if you have to get in line anyway, we're selling you on merit. We don't want any rival service muscling in when we frame the trade see! But it isn't so hard as it looks, because we're right with the pols anyway and kick in on the campaign chest. Then, of course, there are always little odd jobs that we do for the boys, like seeing that the right parties get to the poles and the wrong ones don't. So all we got to do is to call on the boss and say, "Bz.zzz...bz.zzz" and its fixed. A thing like this is a pleasure, because we like the "bucket of blood" fight clubs anyway.

Cambridge, Oct. 21—Athletic Director Bill Bingham stated that Harvard would permit its three major home football games to be broadcast over a nationwide network and that Ted Husing, famed sports broadcaster who was barred in recent seasons because he once termed Barry Wood's playing "putrid," will be at the microphone.

Well, we had Bingham out riding a couple of nights ago and we drove up to the Quincy quarry. Sam the Bite points to the hunnert foot drop and says, "It must be awful cold down there. Boy! I would not want to drop that distance, even if I was alive at the time." Then he looks hard at Bingham and enquires, "Would you?" So Bingham shivers and says, "No, I guess not." So we all ride home, see; as snug as a crowd of hallmates after a sorority dance.

Well our Mr. Chiseler Patrone will make a personal call on you shortly. I guess he won't have any trouble selling you!

LUCK SMILES ON BOB SMITH OF BRAVES

By JOE CASHMAN

Now take f'rinstance, Bobby Smith, the Atlanta thrush who was rescued from the Cincinnati Reds by Judge Fuchs a few days back. There's a fellow who couldn't miss striking oil were he reduced to wielding a pick and shovel for a living. But he'll never have to do that. Baseball has been too good to him.

Bobby was delighted to be shifted from the last place Reds to the first-division Braves but he couldn't have been surprised. A kindly star has been guiding him close to those kind of breaks ever since he made his major league debut.

Georgia's pitching pride broke in with the Braves as a shortstop during the managerial reign of Dave Bancroft. An outstanding infielder wouldn't have had a chance of ousting Banny from shortfield in those days, and Smith was far from outstanding. Both his hitting and fielding were below major league par.

GREAT ARM KEPT BOB IN N. E.

Any other rookie of the same class would have been quickly sent on his way. Lucky Bob, though, showed one of the strongest and most accurate arms ever seen at the Wigwam and that saved him.

Several times Banny was on the verge of letting Bobby go, but visions of that great arm always stopped him until he had the happy inspiration to try the youth out as a pitcher.

Young Robert had never hurled or even dreamed of doing so but willing to try anything to stick he began learning the rudiments of the job. He took to it like business to the N. R. A.

In a few weeks he was deemed ready and proved it by beating the Pirates in his first start.

Once again luck was with him. His best ball was, and still is, a high, hard one which when hit travels plenty far. The spacious Wigwam is made to order for that particular ball. In most any other park Bobby probably would have had his ears pinned back and possibly would have quit hurling.

At the Tepee, the long drives made off him were easy for his outfielders and he gained the confidence necessary to make the grade. Right then and there, Bobby had enjoyed as much good fortune as any player could expect, but his luck was only starting.

Bobby finished in the money that season and last year received a full World's Series purse, despite the fact that he was never a winning pitcher for the Cubs.

His lucky streak appeared ended when he was sold down the river to the Reds last winter, but here he is today back with the Braves, who seem certain to finish in the money.

And back at the Wigwam he's a winning pitcher again for the first time in three years. He hadn't started a game for the Reds for weeks before his transfer and was believed so far gone that he was let go for the waiver price. Making his second debut as a Brave last week, he blanked the Dodgers with four hits.

SMITH TO TAKE TURN

Up to then, Bill McKechnie had planned to use him only for relief work. Now the pilot declares he will work him regularly.

"I never saw Bobby with so much stuff as he had last week," the Tribal chief stated today, "and I'm so sure that his showing was no flash in the pan that I will start him in one game in tomorrow's twin bill at Ebbetts field."

Verily, some guys have all the luck.

Ed Brandt has been nominated for the series opener this p. m. Ol' Tom Zachary, our other southpaw, will work with Smith tomorrow.

All three turned in victories while the Tribe was taking five out of six from the Careymen up in Boston. So it would seem that the Warriors are in for a most enjoyable visit even though they must face Ray Benge, Van Mungo and Walter Beck, best of the Flatbush sharpshooters, before returning home to play host to the West starting next Tuesday.

NAT AND NATICK BUDDIES GET TOGETHER AT FENWAY

A large day it was for little Buddy Myer of Natick as he was greeted by Buddy Myer, Nats infielder, before the game at Fenway Park. Pilot Joe Cronin of Washington gave little Buddy an autographed ball. Which consoled the Natick youngster no end when his beloved Red Sox were beaten in the ensuing encounter.

SERIES ENDS TOUGH PART OF A. L. LIST FOR HOSE

By DAVID F. EGAN

The brief home stay of the Red Sox will come to an end tomorrow when our boys (Ed note: not our boys; they're our boys after that exhibition in Friday's ninth inning) tee off against the Athletics in a single game, starting no earlier, and no later, than 3 p. m.

Our boys, I am sad to state, went [illegible] rat-traps in the ninth inning after they had built up a lead of 4-2. Hennery Johnson of Bradentown, Fla., who was sunk without trace because of ulcers of the stomach all last season and is just beginning to enjoy a happy recovery, had pitched mee-raculous ball for eight innings.

He had struck out five men. He had restrained the visiting vipers from making more than seven hits. He had held them to two runs, while the Sox were scoring three.

Came the eighth. The bases were awry-eyed with one out. Should Hennery hit for himself or should [illegible] Smead [illegible] step up there? [illegible] Smead was elected, drove in the fourth run with a fly to [illegible] and both he and Hennery retired from the past [illegible]

NATS SCORE SIX RUNS

The ninth was a horrible experience for Marty McManus and all the lads. George Pipgras, after retiring the first batter, was shelled off the mound. Lloyd Brown pitched to only one batter, and walked him. Paul Andrews, hastily warmed up, was separated from two hits and a base on balls. And Johnny Welch finally quelled the uprising, after six runs had been scored.

The Senators are trying for each and every game. If you do not believe it, take a look at the list of pitchers who were used. Al Thomas started and he was followed by Burke, Russell, Stewart, Crowder and Whitehill.

Thomas, Stewart, Crowder and Whitehill are the stars of the staff, but young Joe Cronin, who masterminds from his position at shortstop had no hesitation in throwing his finest flingers against the fighting Red Sox.

Every game they win, you know, puts them that much closer to the pennant for which they are striving and they increased their lead over the idle Yankees to four full games by their victory.

McManus planned to send big Bob Weiland after the Senators this afternoon and Cronin was expected to use either Altrock or Schacht, though there was a possibility that Clark Griffith, who used to be a pitcher in the mauve decade when corsets were no curiosity, might be chosen.

Tomorrow Lloyd Brown will probably pitch against the Athletics. He subdued the Men of McGillicuddy last Wednesday and McManus will attempt to split even on the four-day home stay with left handers patrolling the beat.

SOX TO MAKE BID IN WEST

It is in the West, though, where the Red Sox hope to make their bid for a berth in the first division. The hardest part of the schedule will come to an end tomorrow. They have done most of their playing against the Senators, the Yankees, and the Athletics. From now on, they will be fighting against teams which are only a few games ahead of them in the standing.

They will play four games in Detroit, starting Monday, and then wheel through Cleveland, Chicago and St. Louis before returning East. In that stretch of 16 games they hope to crash into fourth place.

PARK PLAYOFF DATES NAMED

At a meeting held in the office of Bill Mullen, president of the Boston Park Baseball League, the playoff dates for the clubs that finish second and third were assigned for next week.

The Neponset-Hennigan series the first game will be played Tuesday at Neponset, with clubs returning to Jefferson st. Wednesday. If a third game is necessary it will be played at Dorchester Town Field Thursday.

In the Presentation-Mulvey series, the teams will meet Tuesday at Marcella st., Wednesday at Rogers Park, Brighton, and Friday, if necessary, at a field to be decided by the toss of a coin.

All games will start at six o'clock sharp. The winners of these two playoffs will meet the following week.

Sivik Gives One Hit in New Bedford Win

New Bedford, Aug. 12—A hit which fell near three fielders robbed Alex Sivik, New Bedford pitcher of a no hit, no run game as Taunton was beaten 2 to 0 in an N. E. League duel.

Marjorie Harrison, 14, Gains Lake Champlain Links Final

Bluff Point, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP)—Little Marjorie Harrison, 14-year-old daughter of an Ausable Forks professional, had her war clubs tuned today for a battle for her first major golf tournament victory at an age when most girls are still thrilled over dolls.

Familiar with golf clubs since the age of three and an 18-handicap lassie of the links at the age of 10, Marjorie electrified the gallery as she shot her way into the 36-hole finals of the annual International Invitation Women's tournament of the Lake Champlain Country Club in a ding dong match in which victory would be sweet to any woman sharpshooter.

Scoring a fine 89, the girl put out one of the favorites, Miss J. O. Morrisiof, Albany, 1 up, on the 19th green, to earn the right to meet the experienced, long driving Mrs. C. T. Voss of Kingston for the title for which a score of women from the United States and Canada have been battling the past four days.

The secret of little Marjorie's success is her tee shots and her irons. She hits a long ball and her irons, while still a trifle short, are accurate and well played.

Pro Career Farthest From Perry's Mind

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP)—Another of those most vitally concerned reached over today and bitterly shook the shoulders of professional tennis, to awaken the sleeper from the grandiose dream of Ellsworth Vines, Jack Crawford, Henri Cochet and Fred Perry all joining the ranks of a professional troupe together.

This time it was Perry, the slender, fun loving 24-year-old Englishman, whose inspired play with that of Henry (Bunny) Austin swept Great Britain past the United States in the inter-zone final, over France in the challenge round, to return the historic Davis cup to the island kingdom for the first time in 11 long years.

CRAWFORD HERE SOON

Here but a few hours on his visit to the United States that has as its chief objective another meeting with Vines and America's singles championship in the tournament starting at Forest Hills Sept. 2 Perry refused at first even to consider answering a question as to whether he was considering turning professional.

Then he changed his mind.

"Fred Perry," he said shortly, "is not interested in professionalism. That is absolutely the final word."

His flat denial was the second from the quartet recognized as the top four of the world's amateur tennis masters. With almost as much feeling Vines, the lanky Californian, dismissed the story as "bunk" after it had been published simultaneously in two afternoon papers here on "highest authority."

Soon Crawford, Australian ace, who downed Vines in the Wimbledon final as Perry beat him in the inter-zone finals, will be here with his answer. He too is coming over in quest of America's singles crown. Cochet will also be here for the championships, and the final say.

EXHIBITION TOMORROW

Once the ice had been broken Perry seemed able to discuss the matter more freely as he watched with his companions who arrived in New York with him, H. G. N. Lee, Edward R. Avory, and Frank Wilde the play in the Eastern [illegible] courts championship.

"I was torn apart when I returned to England after the Davis Cup matches in France," he said. "I slept for 24 hours, then went to dinners and parties until I got on the boat. I slept all the way across, and I was goaded by newspapermen asking me if I were to turn pro. I knew nothing about it 'til then.

He has agreed to play an exhibition singles match with Frankie Parker and team with George Lott, American Davis Cup doubles player against Parker and Frank Shields in doubles, Sunday afternoon here. He will play doubles with Wilde in the Casino invitation tournament at Newport, R. I., next week, where Lee, British Davis Cup doubles player, will team with Avory. They probably will play the same way in the national doubles later this month at the Longwood Cricket Club, Brookline. Perry will not play formal singles until the nationals.

Capacity Crowd at Primo Exhibition

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 12 (INS)—Primo Carnera, heavyweight champion, won the decision over Harold Mays, Bayonne, N. J., his sparring partner, in a four-round exhibition here last night. The giant Italian, weighing 270 pounds to Mays' 210, cuffed and slugged the Jersey fighter around without attempting seriously to register a knockout.

A capacity crowd of 5000 fans saw the show. Carnera also was to have boxed Jack Renault, the former Canadian "Mountie," but the State Boxing Commission refused to let him box with both Mays and Renault.

Sam Byrd, Ruth Sub, Has 69 on Philadelphia Links

It might not be a bad idea for George Herman, who fancies himself considerably as a golfer, to do the same thing any time he happens to weary himself on the links.

For young Byrd, taking advantage of a day so bad the Yanks and the Athletics couldn't even play baseball, went out to the Llanerch links here and shot himself a magnificent 38-31—69, just one stroke above the record for the course held by Denny Shute, New British open champion, and the course professional.

As much as it hurt, Ben Chapman and Russell Van Atta, team mates, attested to the fact that despite the rain and fairways so heavy here was scarcely any roll, Byrd came in with five birdies and four pars for the 31 that broke the record for the home nine.

Byrd is so used to the role of a substitute that it felt perfectly normal to turn the trick with borrowed clubs. He had never before played the course.

"I have sent a wire to old Pop Foster asking him if he is interested in the match," Dunn confided to me. "Foster is a fine character, but does not jump at things quickly. I'll have to do quite a lot of negotiating with him, but feel that I shall get places eventually.

"I featured McLarnin in a number of bouts when I was general manager of the Olympia Arena in Detroit. McLarnin made a great deal of money when boxing under my promotion. As a result, I believe I have an excellent chance to secure the services of the welterweight champion."

New Boxing Interest

I do not feel as pessimistic about the boxing game as some of the other sports writers. The game has been picking itself up off the canvas since Max Baer knocked out Max Schmeling. Upsets and knockouts are the best possible tonic for the noble art of sock.

YACHT SERIES WINDUP FETE ON TONIGHT

By F. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

Marblehead, Aug. 12—Comedy [illegible]s were introduced in the last day of Race Week here this morning when the boys and girls ran their annual bang-and-go-back race for motor boats. The winner was Betsy, owned by Donald Brown, a fisherman type motor sailer almost as wide as she is long, which won because she was the slowest boat in the fleet.

The only other craft to complete [illegible] was the Shiver-Me-[illegible] owned by A. D. Leeson. [illegible] were disabled when [illegible] refused to percolate, [illegible] others were disqualified for either starting or finishing too soon. This race is the one event of race week which is not taken [illegible].

The power boats all start together and run down the bay toward the [illegible] boat. When a gun is fired they immediately turn around and go back. Any boats getting back to the finish line in less time than it took her to go out is disqualified and accurate judgment of distance is necessary if a boat is to [illegible] the others and still not [illegible] too soon.

The [illegible] races of the mid-summer [illegible] were completed this morning in the Brutal Beast Class. Winners of the Corinthian Yacht Club trophies were as follows:

First division—Snap, Gloria Murphy.

Second division—Dixit, Richard Pierce.

This morning's races were won by Katydid, sailed by Faith Conant, in the first division; Dixit, second division; Sea Bat, sailed by John McBeath, third division, and Black Bird, sailed by Joseph Santry, fourth division.

Tonight, after the last race has been sailed the skippers and their crews will gather at the Corinthian Yacht Club to receive their trophies. There will be an informal buffet supper for those who have taken part in the races of the last three days, the closing ceremony of race week.

Tomorrow the 17 ties that remain from the Eastern Series will be sailed off, but since the Corinthian events were scored on a point system, few if any deadlocks are expected for that club's silverware.

Elsewhere tomorrow will also be a quiet Sunday for yachtsmen, most of whom had quite enough competition in the last eight days to last them for some time. The next event of local interest, will be the visit of the New York Yacht Club fleet to Gloucester and Marblehead early next week.

Under command of Com. Junius Morgan, some 30 racing craft go to Vineyard Haven from Newport today, and on Monday run around Cape Cod to Provincetown. If the weather is favorable, the yachts will arrive at Gloucester on Tuesday night, and on Wednesday race to Marblehead by way of Boston Lightship.

DR. VANCE IN SKEET LEAD

Dr. R. G. Vance was leading the field in the Massachusetts Individual Skeet championship this afternoon at the Quincy Gun Club in Braintree. The Waltham doctor, a recent convert to the game, led the state's finest shooters with a 74, one shot better than Len Moulton and Harold Betts.

Tied for fourth place were Gus Macone of Concord and Louis Verza, each with 72.

In the women's division, Mrs. Gertrude Wheeler, defending champion from the Cape, had a two-shot lead on Mrs. A. M. Vance. Mrs. Wheeler turned in the highly respectable card of 63.

The championships opened this morning and were to continue this afternoon and tomorrow.

Dr. R. G. Vance, 74, Len Moulton, 73, H. A. Betts, 73; A. W. Macone, 72, Louis Verza, 72, O. J. Hunton, 70, Dr. E. H. Wiswell, 70, Joseph Lander, 70, J. W. Crowell, 69, F. R. C. Hopewell, 69; H. A. Turner, 69; W. F. Allen, 69, R. C. Pearl, 68, Charles Mitchell, 68, F. Newcomb, 67, S. N. Coleman, 68, S. N. DeRosset, 66, J. C. Upton, 66; J. Mulvaney, 65, G. W. Gale, 63.

WATCH CITY ACE WINDS UP FOR THRONE BARRAGE

Oliver Mitchell, Waltham Gun Club captain, tunes up for the defense of his Massachusetts skeet shoot crown which started today and continues tomorrow at the Quincy Gun Club grounds at Braintree. Note ejected shell in air above gun, as Mitchell prepares to kill another clay pigeon.

Sheridans Duel Waltham Nine

The feud between the Sheridans Boston Twilight League members, of Watertown and Waltham, both will be settled tomorrow afternoon at the Waltham Bike Park when the first of a two-game series will be played. The second game is listed for Tuesday evening at Victory Field, Watertown.

CHUCK KLEIN MAY JOIN CUBS

New York, Aug. 12 (US)—A $100,000 baseball deal involving the transfer of Chuck Klein from the Phillies to the Cubs is reported to have been closed by the Philadelphia and Chicago clubs with delivery to be made next spring.

Confirmation of this transaction comes from Chicago where it is said that Babe Herman will be shifted to the Phillies.

Though the Cubs have yet to be counted out as repeaters for the National League flag this season the club is already laying in talent for next season with Klein as the big prize.

CLARE, RESNIK IN GOLF FINAL

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 12 (INS)—Charley Clare of Race Brook, state champion, downed Bobby Grant of Wethersfield 3 and 2 today and went into the finals of the annual New Haven Country Club invitation golf tourney against Burt Resnik of Race Brook, who defeated George Davidson of Avon 3 and 2.

Resnik's play was the sensation of the round. The former Yale star finished the 18 holes in 69, two under par, and 5 better than his youthful opponent's card.

Horse Players Bled by Fake Tip Bureaus

This series on the horse race game's shady spots has shown many ways in which betters can lose out, whether races are run honestly or not. The hazards of form, jockeys, crooked work by stable employes, trainers and the like, all add up to prove the axiom:

"All Horse-Players MUST Die Broke."

By KENT A. HUNTER

"One who gives a tip on a race horse for an expected compensation, especially in hopes of a share in any winnings—usually contemptuous."

Race track authorities call them harsher names and keep detectives at every track to run them outside the limits of the track property whenever seen. Pinkerton detectives, at the major tracks, toss touts outside the grounds, and sometimes, if they are persistent, toss them into jail.

But a tout doesn't have to be inside a race track to work. He can call himself a turf commissioner or some other high sounding title, advertise in bold or in tricky language that he has possession of real stable secrets and offer to sell that information for a figure ranging from four or five dollars a week to as high as 100 a day.

The small time player, disgusted by a string of losing selections of his own, or lured by the recurrent advertisements of the touts in papers devoted to racing, may send in his fee. And what does he get?

TOUTS PULL IN CREDULOUS

To be able to answer that question several of these tout services were subscribed to.

The advertisement of "John McAuliffe & Co.—turf commissioners" on August 4 in a racing paper, was particularly alluring. It read, in part:

"Releasing the most sensational information ever put before the American Racing Public—$3 daily, $5 for six days—Strictly and only two horses daily.

"Written certificate to all clients—All subscribers receive a signed certificate that the two horses they receive are the horses advertised. This includes out of town as well as city clients."

And then:

NO WIRE FROM TIPSTERS

"What about my two horses for today? I sent you my two dollars by wire—this is David Goodstein calling"—that started the talk.

"Wait a minute, I'll look it up—yes, David Goodstein—we got your wire."

"You're in the city, aren't you? All our city clients call on the telephone. I'll give you your two horses on the telephone."

"What do you care if you get 'em over the phone. It's winners you want, ain't it? The two today are 'Go Forth' in the 3rd at Hawthorne, and 'Polly's Folly' in the 5th at Hawthorne. Got 'em?"

That was that. The races were run. Neither "Go Forth" nor "Polly's Folly" finished in the money.

BUT! THE ADVERTISEMENT

But, on Saturday, August 5, under the same ad as that on August 4, "John McAuliffe and Co.—Turf Commissioners," advertised:

"Yesterday's strictly two horses

"Granite Rock—$21.80—won,

"Candy Man—$18.45—won."

The two horses named in the ad on August 5 did win and did pay the prices given, but they were NOT the two horses given "David Goodstein" over the telephone on August 4, in return for his $2 subscription, from the offices of John McAuliffe and Co.—Turf Commissioners.

"David Goodstein" called Wisconsin 7-4234 again.

"Why," he asked, did you send me 'Polly's Folly' and 'Go Forth' and then, when they didn't even finish third, advertise that you sent out Granite Rock and Candy Man to your clients?"

"Oh, yes," said the voice from the McAuliffe offices, "that was a mistake. You see, at the last minute, there was a change from the track. We got a late special, understand? And we got the late horses after you called. We didn't know where to get you."

"My name," said Goodstein, "was on the telegram with my two bucks."

"Yeah, I know, but we got the horses too late to send a wire."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"I'll tell you, pal, we'll give you, absolutely free, the two horses for today. You play them, they're sure to win."

"Do you send me the written guarantee that they're the same two horses you're going to advertise tomorrow?"

"No, of course not, we only give the guarantee to our weekly subscribers, but here's tomorrow's two—'Gramarye' in the 3rd at Hawthorne and 'Oaten' in the 8th at Hawthorne. Get on 'em, pal and make yourself a roll."

"Gramarye" ran fourth and "Oaten" fifth, but Sunday, August 6, John McAuliffe and Co.—Turf Commissioners, advertised:

"Black Diamond—$27.70—won.

"Miss Monoa—$16.75—won."

And under that:

"The Truth at All Times—Everybody positively receives the same two horses which are advertised every day—win or lose."

All horse players must die broke"—and go broke quicker if they believe the stories told by touts.

FATHER-AND-SON TEAM IN NEW BEDFORD FOUR-BALL FINAL

BESSES DEFEAT REED, BARRETT BY 4 AND 2

Semi-Final Results

E. J. Besse and S. J. Besse, Jr., New Bedford, defeated E. S. Reed and R. F. Barrett, Thorny Lea, 4 and 2.

By BILL GRIMES

New Bedford, Aug 12—Two local teams, S. J. Besse and S. J. Besse Jr., and Dave Whiteside and Dr. Joshua Weeks, are playing the finals of the championship flight of the Country Club of New Bedford four-ball invitation this afternoon before a large and partisan gallery.

In the semi-finals this morning the Besse father-and-son combination eliminated Searles Reed and Dick Barrett, Thorny Lea, 4 and 2, while Dave Whiteside and Dr. Weeks put out a dangerous pair when they defeated Dan Wright and George Sylvia, Reservation. In the Besse-Reed and Barrett match, the senior member of the Besse family received eleven strokes and used them to great advantage, winning six holes and halving one by virtue of his handicap.

Reed and Barrett, especially the former, put up a gallant battle against almost unbeatable odds. With Reed as a scratch man he was obliged to give six strokes going out and this cost him no less than the same number of holes. Despite the handicap Reed and Barrett were only one down at the turn and squared the match at the tenth where Barrett got a birdie three.

WIN THREE IN A ROW

Besse, Sr., won the 11th with a stroke and after they had halved the 12th and 13th where there were no strokes, the Besses put on a spurt, winning three in a row and the match 4 and 2.

After putting his second in the rough going to the 14th the senior member of the Besse family laid his third eight feet from the pin and dropped his put for a three and and a win. With Junior on the 15th from the tee, Barrett went over the green and Reed pushed his iron shot, Junior winning the hole with a 3 and then Besse Senior came up with a net three at the 16th to win the match.

30-FOOT PUTT CLINCHER

Whiteside and Weeks, with the former carrying the load, jumped Wright and Sylvia by winning the first two holes with a birdie and a par. But they were both in trouble going to the third, where Whiteside pushed his drive, and they lost their hole to a three. Sylvia with his stroke got a half with Whiteside at the long fourth, and Weeks came up with a half at the fifth. Going to the sixth Whiteside was out of bounds and although his par partner was right down the middle he was unable to get better than a six and lost the hole to a five, one over par.

Sylvia got a half with a stroke at the short seventh and also halved the eighth by virtue of another stroke. All even going to the ninth, Weeks came through with a four to put the local team 1 up at the turn. Another stroke got Sylvia a half at the tenth and Wright stood off Whiteside and Weeks at the 11th and took the hole with ninth stroke to square the match.

The Reservation pair collapsed at this point and lost the 12th and 13th holes to be two down, through the 15th where Wright got a net three for a win. One up and two to play going to the 17th, Whitside got on the green from the tees and then rolled in a curling 30-foot putt for a deuce and the match 2 and 1.

A Rugged British Sailor Prepares for Aerial Combat in Clash at Quincy

Taff Powell leaps high in the air to send the ball akiting during practice on board H. M. S. Danae, now stationed at the Charlestown Navy Yard. Taff intends to be ready for some high stepping on the pitch. Two sides were organized aboard ship at Gibraltar in March and the first game was played with a team from H. M. S. Comorant at Gibraltar. Three games were played in Montreal with the Verdun Hospital eleven. Powell's team winning two and losing one. Later the team played Corbner Brook on Newfoundland. All the members of the team learned their soccer lessons in the navy. The men will show how well they absorbed soccer lore tomorrow at Faxon field, Quincy, where they play the recently organized Canadian Legion eleven of Quincy. The ship's cricket team was to play this afternoon at the Linden crease in Malden, opposing Mystic Lodge. Members of the ship's crew planned to attend both cricket and soccer games today and tomorrow.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

—By BILL GRIMES—

New Bedford, Aug 12—The Country Club of New Bedford course is in splendid condition due to the untiring efforts of Mike Grady, the greenskeeper.

During this tournament there has been 27 18-hole matches and 12 extra hole matches, which speaks well for the handicaping system.

Dr. Weeks Aces

Dr. Joshua Weeks stole the show when he holed out for an ace at the seventh hole in a Friday p. m. match. It was a break for the home pair, for they were two down at the time and the miracle shot took the wind out of L. P. Keeler and J. A. Reese, Highland.

The annual invitation four-ball dance was held at the club and attended by 300 couples.

Jack Forsman, Winged Foot, and Lor De Harmon, Pelham, played at Kittanset and the former carded a 78 without holing a putt of more than five feet. Foraman was hitting his tee shots and irons like a Guilford, but his putting was much off color. Forsman played with the Metropolitan Leslie Cup team at Charles River two years ago.

Miss Deborah Verry came over from Kittanset to watch the quarter-finals. Miss Verry announced that the sixth annual Kittanset women's four-ball tournament will be played on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

Among the well-known women golfers who will be at Kittanset are Miss Enid Wilson, former British titlist; Miss Dorothy Richards, Miss Dorothy Hunter, Miss Mary Parkinson, Miss Helen Hackney, Mrs E. C. Stone, Mrs. D. M. Belcher, Mrs. C. F. Eaton, Jr., Mrs. W. G. Dow, Mrs. W. M. Ferris, Jr., Mrs. Willie Howard and Mrs. R. F. Kimball.

Cherry in Finals

George F. Cherry, genial president of the club, advanced to the finals of the one-round-a-day division. Paired with Bob Wilson, President Cherry defeated R. F. Baldwin and William Canning, 6 and 5.

Cherry and Wilson were to meet F. W. Steele and Dr. D. Pratt for the title this afternoon. Steele and Pratt reached the finals by defeating C. A. Bonney and Col. Thomas Jefferson, Campbell, 2 and 1.

John Gilholm, the local professional, has played little tournament golf this season, but has been shooting in the low 70's at his home course regularly. John and his brother, Frank, stand ready to meet any professional brothers in a four-ball match.

MISS ROUND WINS TITLE

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP)—Dorothy Round, Great Britain's foremost woman player, today annexed the Eastern Grass Courts singles crown by defeating her fellow countrywoman, Mary Heeley, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4.

Although ranked second to Miss Heeley in the English ratings, Miss Round came through as expected and played an extremely steady game throughout.

Miss Heeley played the entire first set in stocking feet but nevertheless kept skidding all over the Westchester Country Club turf. Changing to spiked shoes, she started off strong in the second set but Miss Round was the better of the two and rallied smoothly.

Cliff Sutter, defending champion and topseeded entrant, won his way to the finals of men's singles with a straigth set 6-4, 6-3 victory over Gregory Mangin, the indoor titleholder.

Lowell N. E. Nine Tied by Worcester

Lowell, Aug. 12—Lowell tied Worcester, 7 to 7, in a New England League game here that ended after the eighth inning because of darkness.

MENERA IN BIKE RACE TONIGHT

Winter, who is powerful in addition to being speedy, will test the ability of the new Italian rider Menera, in addition to the field, for at the present time the New York rider is performing at his best.

Jackie Sheehan of New York was secured today as an added attraction in the Butler Cup race tonight in an effort to force Menara to his best speed.

In addition to the motor event, 10 other races have been billed by Manager Jimmy Mede. The foremost of these is the 10-mile tandem paced race between Walter McKenzie and Felix LaFenetre of France. The five-mile professional race will have the largest number of pros of the season starting from scratch.

SARAZEN LEADS FARRELL, 1 UP

Blue Mound Club, Milwaukee, Aug 12 (AP)—Gene Sarazen finished one up over Johnny Farrell, of New York, at the half way juncture of their 36-hole semi-final struggle in the national professional golf championship today as two unknown strangers of big time competition Willie Goggin, of Salada Beach, Calif., and Jimmy Hines, New York, stood all square.

BUDGE JUNIOR TITLE WINNER

Culver, Ind., Aug. 2 (AP)—Donald Budge, of Oakland, Calif., today won the national junior singles tennis championship for 1933 by defeating Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, 6-4, 6—2, 1—6, 0—6, 8—6.

Pay $7000 for Colt At Saratoga Mart

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug 12 (INS)—A bay colt by Mad Hatter and Killashandra, the property of Leslie Combs, was sold to Harry Giddings, trainer and Canadian sportsman, last night for the top price of $7000 at the Saratoga yearling sales.

The Sagamore Stable paid the next highest price when "Bud" Stotler went to $4000 for a bay colt by Apprehension-Family Frost.

Postpone Handball Play at L Street

The semi-final match in the N. E. A. A. U. handball championships scheduled at L st this morning between Julius Rutzky and Izzy Curwitz was put over to next Wednesday morning because of wet courts.

The other semi-final between George Plansky and Neil O'Connor was to be played late this afternoon if weather permitted.

BROUILLARD TIED TO MARA CONTRACT

By JACK CONWAY

[illegible] of [illegible] middleweight [illegible] will be staged in New York under the direction of Tim Mara, Morris Lemoine announced.

"Brouillard is under contract to defend his title for Tim Mara," said Lemoine. "We signed this contract before the Ben Jeby bout. Mara gave Lou his opportunity to become champion, and we naturally intend to string along with him.

I have offers for bouts from the New York Garden and Boston Garden. I cannot consider the New York Garden's offer until I first comply with the terms of the Mara contract.

Billy Ames of the Boston Garden has made me an attractive offer. I would like Brouillard to show here in a title defense contest, but such a bout cannot be staged until after the Mara contract expires. It is possible Brouillard will participate in an overweight bout here."

U. S. RECOVERY IS SEEN AS ON SECOND PHASE

Larger Consuming Is Viewed as Basis of New Upturn

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor, Boston American

United Business Service of Boston today tells us it believes the second phase of the United States recovery is about to show itself. The service says:

"The first phase of the recovery has now passed. This was initiated by speculative purchasing in anticipation of inflation. The second phase, which is based on larger consumption, made possible by higher levels of industrial payrolls and increased farm income, is starting. Better retail sales are forecast, which should reduce the stocks of manufactured goods and bring about a resumption of the uptrend in productive activity this fall."

New England Council has been waging a vigorous campaign to boom the very important tourist industry in this section, with Bradbury F. Cushing of the Hotel Statler a foremost figure in activities. Aids are to be found in almost every city and New England town. Governor Ely has helped the cause along. It is interesting to note how the hands of Government are being extended across the New England border in popular Quebec to swell tourist travel there, the bulk of which passes through such New England gateways as Derby, Vt., and Jackman, Me.

At the Boston offices of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce we learn that the government of Quebec intends to exert every possible effort to stimulate tourist traffic in the province. A special department of "tourism," it is pointed out, has been organized in the Ministry of Roads. The province has been divided into eight districts, each under the supervision of a local tourist agency whose business it will be to advertise the advantages of that particular section of the country and to stimulate tourist traffic therein.

Share Market Acts Well in Face of Staple Price Dip

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Considering the sudden fluctuations in many staple prices toward the close of the market week it can not be said that shares behaved too badly. Apparently the urge, or the need to liquidate is fast passing. If this is the case it strongly suggests the likelihood of competitive bidding for stocks next week unless strong interests deliberately exert a restraining influence.

After all the prime drive is for higher commodity, and not stock prices. The latter are simply following the parade. So we are inclined to place some confidence in a market which seems so capable of ignoring apparent weakness in the staples. It may easily be that the dip in cotton and wheat is traceable to the degree of bullishness of government crop reports. Many expected smaller estimates than those published.

PURCHASES MAY BE MADE SOON

In view of the above it may be necessary to turn again to the buying side of equities. The reaction off the top, made at mid-week, is going to allow just about enough room to turn around in. So we will chalk up an error on the side of caution if early events in the next week justify assumption of risks on the long side of the market.

Before taking a definite stand on the bull side some professionals ask a further display of internal strength. They want proof that the probable course of economic events is going to be strong enough to offset a mediocre technical position. Mediocre because the absence of weak longs is offset by a greatly reduced short account.

Tapewise the chief contribution to bullishness is the determined way in which volume and total issues traded contract on the downside. Friday the number of issues traded fell almost 100 under Thursday. Volume dropped nearly 1,500,000 shares. No evidence of a real selling drive offered by such a performance.

Chartwise a recovery on the hourly averages from yesterday's lows would be a bullish omen. Principally because those lows came after a retracement of approximately 50 per cent of the week's rally. Up through 98.50 and 50 on this index would about complete the technical evidence for the buy side.

Home Owners' Loan Warning Is Given

A warning against "racketeers" who may attempt to charge fees to aid home owners in filing applications for Federal aid in refinancing their mortgages has been issued by the New York branch of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. Charges for such assistance, or for promises to speed up action on applications, are illegal under the act.

Floor Coverings to Be Marked Higher

DEVELOPMENTS OF WEEK ARE CHEERFUL

Recovery Act Seen in Operation as Real Uplift Factor

The past week's developments have taken a decidedly encouraging turn.

The alarming gap between industrial production and consumer buying and employment, that featured the spring trade improvement, has been partly closed, largely due to the actual workings of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

The stock market, which had settled into a critical trading range, has broken through on the upside.

The first augurs well for the fall months. It comes as industry, after its rush to beat the codes and stock up in anticipation of price advances, slackens its pace.

The success or failure of the entire N. R. A. program rests on consumer buying and a wholesale return to work of the jobless. This week has brought the first concrete signs of consumer buying and reductions in unemployment as a result of the N. R. A. activities. The stimulation is not confined to any one locality, but seems to be fairly general throughout the country.

The buying, naturally, has been in moderate volume, but it is the swing in the desired direction. And it is coming ahead of scheduled time.

For two weeks the market had held in a trading range between a top of 96 and a bottom of 88 in the Dow-Jones industrial price averages, following its rebound from the July crash.

The market started forward Tuesday and on Wednesday pushed through to a new high for the recovery, but on Thursday, after extending its gains of the preceding day, was upset by the unfavorable U. S. St[illegible] unfilled orders report, coupled with heavy profit-taking in the liquor shares. Friday, the market turned dull on the decline.

The high for the week was 100.11 in the industrial averages, reached Thursday. This compares with last week's closing of 92.62, and last night's close of 97.47.

The market has held more than half of the week's advance, the net gain being 4.85. This is a good showing, considering the action of the commodity markets. Cotton is off $1 a bale on the week, while grains are down about 3 cents a bushel. Unfavorable government crop reports explain the weakness in the commodities.

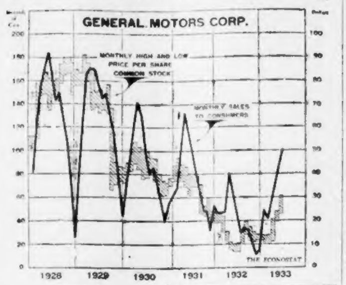
The 100 level in the averages, where the market bumped Wednesday and Thursday, is the point where stocks hesitated in June before surging through to the July peak. The July peak was 110, and the low on the break was around 4, making the recovery to Thursday's best level better than 60 per cent.

The outlook continues good for the Fall. Inflation is beginning to take a hold. The N. R. A. program is already beginning to be felt. Corporations that have been long in the "red" are reporting sharp rebounds to the profit side of their ledgers.

Republic Starts Up Its Last Idle Group

Some of the major steel companies are reporting increases in activity, after slight slowing up from the hectic pace of previous weeks. The Republic Steel Corp., is starting to heat its battery of 75 coke ovens, last idle group, making total of 204 active.

Gen. Motors Sales Up



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Editor, the Economist

The accompanying chart shows the monthly high and low of General Motors together with monthly sales from 1928 through the first half of 1933. Sales, it may be noted, are the highest of any month since June, 1931, and are almost twice as great as those in the same month of 1932.

Furthermore, preliminary figures on production and retail sales for the month of July indicate that General Motors is likely to show an even more impressive picture of sales for the month of July. Output of cars for the third week in July established a new high record for the year with every indication of a healthy increase in sales in the immediate future.

An interesting feature of the sales analysis is the revelation that a sharp rise has taken place in rural sections, particularly during the past 30 days. The month of June showed a gain in these sections of between 40 and 50 per cent as compared to the corresponding period of last year. This is obviously a result of the greatly enhanced purchasing power of agriculture.

An estimate of cash income of our farmers, based upon the movement of cash crops to market during the month of June, showed a rise of 37 per cent as compared with the same month in 1932. This is now being reflected in increased buying not only of motor cars but of the other varied products which farming communities have denied themselves during the past three years.

The picture fails to do justice to the manner in which General Motors has snapped out of depression levels during the first six months of 1933. The earnings report for the second quarter shows an increase of $71,954,148 in sales as compared to the first quarter. Of this $41,198,169 was added to earnings for the second quarter and indicates that a little more than 57 per cent of the net increase in sales was retained in the form of profit.

Furthermore, the increase of the cash position of the company from $135,711,686 to $200,188,763 shows that approximately 90 per cent of the net sales were used to increase the cash position of the company. This measures the extraordinary extent to which General Motors adapted itself to the hard circumstances of depression and is likewise an augur of the earnings in prospect should business conditions continue to improve.

Leather Market's Strength Is Held

Shoe & Leather Reporter today says hides and skins, and the leather made from them, are alike affected by the protracted delay in the formulation and authorization of codes for the operation of tanners and shoe manufacturers. Leaders of each industry have spent weary hours in attempts to compose the difficulties which have cropped up. Pending the final settlement of the code question there is little inclination to do more than mark time at the tanneries and shoe factories. In spite of this peculiar situation the markets hold their strength. There appears to be little inclination at this time to sell or buy.

General Electric Grants Pay Raise

General Electric Co. announces for the Schenectady plant a 10 per cent increase in pay for piece work, hourly work and salaried work up to the $2500 level. Increase affects between 11,000 and 12,000 persons.

Big Southern Mill Resuming Dividends

Victor-Monaghan Co., one of the largest southern cotton manufacturers, declared a dividend of $1 per share on the common stock, payable September 1. This will be the first common dividend since June, 1930.

Liverpool Cotton Prices Are Easier

Liverpool, Aug. 1 (INS)—There was a fair demand for spots cotton today with prices easier. Receipts totaled 15,000 bales, including 7700 American. Middling fair was quoted at 6.85d; strictly good middling at 6.40d; good middling, 6.10d; strictly middling, 5.80d; middling, 5.65d; strictly low middling, 5.50d; low middling, 5.30d; strictly good ordinary, 5.10d, and good ordinary, 4.80d.

Futures were barely steady with October at 5.51d, and closing at 5.43d; March opening at 5.60d, and closing at 5.52d; and May opening at 5.62d, and closing at 5.56d.

Remington Arms Co. Buys Trap Concern

Remington Arms Co. has purchased the Chamberlain Cartridge & Target Co. of Findlay, O., which makes a line of traps and clay pigeons used by sportsmen. The Chamberlain Co. will continue to operate its plant at Findlay, but the sales will be handled through the Bridgeport division.

Livingston & Co. Open Ten Branches

Livingston & Co., members of the New York Exchange, have opened 10 new branch offices in the South, of which eight are in Virginia, one in West Virginia and one in Tennessee.

MOTOR LEADERS ARE CHEERFUL ON OUTLOOK

Usual Summer Slump Has Been Totally Absent This Year

Detroit, Aug. 12 (INS) — With General Motors Corporation declaring dividends on common and preferred stock, the automobile market this week showed no signs of lapsing from the unprecedented strength it has displayed all summer.

General Motors, one of the brightest spots in the industry throughout the depression, declared a dividend of 25 cents on its common stock and $1.25 on its $5 preferred stock.

At the same time General Motors and Chrysler — who, with Ford, comprise the "big three" of the industry — made very encouraging sales reports. Their statements gave rise to new hopes that the amazing strength of the market would be sustained until the normal fall buying period sets in.

Chrysler reported an all-time record for July shipments of Plymouth, Chrysler, Dodge and DeSoto cars, totaling 55,119 units, nearly five times the July total for last year. This brought total Chrysler sales for the first seven months of 1933 to 272,888 units, 74 per cent greater than the same period last year and 23 per cent better than last year's entire sales volume.

W. Ledyard Mitchell, chairman of Chrysler Export Corp. also reported encouraging signs of revival of buying power abroad.

"A marked improvement in business abroad has taken place within the first six months of the year as compared with the same period of 1932."

Export shipments of National Automobile Chamber of Commerce members for the first half of this year were 16 per cent greater than for the same period of 1932.

After a survey of buying conditions throughout the country, Robert C. Graham, executive vice-president of Graham Motor Corporation, saw "undeniable proof" of trade revival.

Roy D. Chapin, head of Hudson Motor Co., announced Friday that the company would add 500 men to it payroll here and boost its August schedule by 1000 cars.

Pontiac reported that sales for the first seven months of 1933 exceeded those for the same period of last year by 21,828 cars. Buick's July sales were 91 per cent higher than for the same month last year, and Cadillac 57 per cent higher.

De Soto reported the entire August output of its plant has already been sold.

Jewel Tea's Sales For 4 Weeks Off

Jewel Tea Co., Inc., reports that its sales for the four weeks ending July 15, 1933, were $712,435 as compared with $771,576 for parallel weeks in 1932, a decrease of 7.66 per cent. Sales for the first 28 weeks of 1933 were $5,313,295, as compared with $6,084,486 for a like period in 1932, a decrease of 12.39 per cent.

Sales of the 85 stores of Jewel Food Stores, Inc., a subsidiary of the Jewel Tea Co., Inc., for the four weeks ending July 15, 1933, were $303,397. Sales for the 28 weeks ending July 15, 1933, with an average of 86 stores were $2,091,846.

Market Feature for Week Is U. S. Crops Forecast

A bearish cotton report, showing a 12,314,000-bale crop, more than 1,000,000 bales above the highest expectation, upset both the stock and commodity markets.

The report on wheat showed a 4,000,000-bushel increase in the crop over the July estimates.

Court rejected Globe & Rutgers' plea to end rehabilitation program. State barred from selling 10,000,000 of its securities.

Drug, Inc., split up voted.

Republic Gas Ends Deposits on Aug. 18

New York, Aug. 12—It was announced today that deposits of Republic Gas Corporation first lien collateral 6 per cent convertible bonds, Series A, for participation in the amended plan of reorganization will be closed on Aug. 18.

In its announcement the committee points out that the amended plan provides for reduction in fixed interest charges which it is believed is essential to a sound reorganization.

Grain Market Peg Is to Be Removed

Minimum prices placed on future trading in grain and provisions on Chicago Board of Trade July 31 will be terminated after the close Tuesday.

Restrictions placed on daily fluctuations above or below average closing prices of the preceding business days will remain in effect. These are five cents a bushels on wheat, rye and barley, four cents on corn, three cents on oats, and 50 cents a hundred pounds on provisions.

Women's Coats to Show Price Rises

An advance of 10 per cent to 25 per cent in wholesale prices of women's coats, over those prevailing on August 5, was seen in the New York market as likely to be put into effect under the cloak code, with fabric and fur rises also factors. Coats that formerly wholesaled at $6.50 to $10.50 will cost approximately $8.50 to $13.50.

Carloadings Above Total of Year Ago

Carloadings of American railroads for the week ended August 5 are announced by the American Railway Association as totaling 613,112. Although this was a decrease of 25,284 from the previous week's total, it was 116,486 above the total for the like 1932 week.

PARLEY ROUSES INTEREST IN NEW DOLLAR

Economist Discusses 'Commodity' Coin, Hope of Experts

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Aug. 12—The recent conference of the President with certain professors has aroused new interest in the so-called "commodity dollar." This subject is one that any intelligent man can understand, and it is so important that I will undertake to discuss it today and again next Wednesday.

Incidentally, it should be noted that the professors referred to are J. H. Rogers, a young Yale economist who has attracted attention by his criticisms of the gold standard; Irving Fisher, of new "era, rubber dollar," and prohibition fame; and J. George Warren, a Cornell agricultural economist who advocates soft money.

* * *

Now let us see what the professors are trying to sell to the President. That is the "commodity dollar?"

The general idea of the thing is that the standard money unit (1) should not consist of gold or any standard material, but should be based on some average price of a large number of commodities; and (2) should not be a fixed quantity, but should be subject to frequent change.

The idea is to make money a means of regulating the heighth of some price average. This would be attempted by adjusting the dollar so that if prices should rise, the purchasing power of the dollar would be increased by some authority. If prices should fall, the purchasing power of the dollar would be arbitrarily decreased.

In this way, the commodity dollar advocates would seek to keep the dollar's purchasing power constant, and to stabilize prices.

* * *

One of their most talked of methods is to change the quantity of gold in the gold dollar. For example, if prices fall 10 per cent Prof. Fisher would have us put 10 per cent less gold in the standard dollar. Instead of 23.22 grams, we would reduce the weight to 20.9 grams.

This he thinks would make the dollar less valuable, so that it would take more dollars to buy commodities, and thus make prices higher again.

Others would rely on changes in bank credit as the means of upsetting the natural changes in price. When commodity prices fall, they would manufacture more credit, which they think could be controlled to bring prices up to any desired level.

Still others would abandon all relation to gold, and would have the government issue "fiat" paper money. By changing the quantity of par money they think they could keep commodity prices stable and produce a dollar having constant purchasing power. This is the "manages currency" idea.

By various means, you see, they all take some average of commodity prices, and assume that some level of this price is desirable. They would make changes in the dollar or in the quantity of money to try to keep that level of prices.

They say that in this way they could keep the dollar in constant purchasing power.

Big Canada Growth Forecast by Price

Next generation should see a population of 25,000,000 in Canada, William Price, Ontario attorney general is quoted as saying in London Daily Express; he says there is room in Dominion for 10,000,000 more men, in speech on development of Canada.

WILL ROGERS BACK BROADCASTING

Droll Comedian Takes Over Old Spot

By N. F. T.

Tomorrow night on the air would seem to be marked mostly by the return to network nonsense indulgence by Will Rogers, bringing with him his good friend Fred Stone, also a humorist of no mean rating. These two noted comedy characters hold forth at 9 o'clock, to be heard hereabouts through WBZ-WBZA facilities.

* * *

It develops, however, that Will does not have in mind to continue weekly with this Sunday night presentation, as the following week finds George M. Cohan starred in the guest artist role. This marks the first regular commercial effort by Mr. Cohan as a broadcaster. His more than 40 years background as an actor, playwright and theatrical producer should not only serve him well, but be of tremendous value to the radio world from the standpoint of attracting listeners.

* * *

THINNER TENOR

James Melton, the popular NBC tenor and mainstay of the "Revelers" quartet combination, has reduced his weight by 28 pounds and as a result would not be very easily recognized by those who haven't seen him in a year or more.

President Roosevelt is attending the "Press Veterans of 1893" dinner scheduled for tonight and may be heard addressing the group when the festivities are broadcast (WBZ) beginning at 10:15 p. m. Arthur Brisbane, celebrated Hearst newspapers editor, is also among the honored guests attending.

* * *

That weekly "RKO Weekly midnight frolic" has been shifted from Monday night to Tuesday night of next week (WBZ) at 11:15 and brings the voice of Jules (Old Man River) Bledsoe to the local air lanes.

* * *

SPECIAL SOLO

When the big Walter Smith Band period takes place tomorrow night (WNAC) between 8:30 and 9:30, the beautiful Nevin composition "The Rosary" is being contributed by Walter himself as a special cornet solo.

* * *

Those offerings by the Goldman Band conclude next Wednesday night, winding up the eighth consecutive summer concert series by the famous organization through National Broadcasting Company network stations from coast to coast.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Prattle and Tattle!

With the license in their hands and the justice waiting, Jeannie De Lage Matteson suddenly balked at re-wedding her polo-playing husband, Wm. Matteson in Chi, Satty ayem and flew back to Manhattan alone. . .Patricia T. Kelley, among the prettiest of New York newspaperwomen, who divorced her reporter husband last year, became the secret bride of John C. Riley a fortnite ago. . .Elmer Balaban, youngest of the theatrical brothers, eloped Monday with Elenore Pottasch . . . Poor Jean Malin! He was to head East next wk. to open a nite-club here in his own name. . .Lona Andre, the baby Wampas star, and Cartoonist Ham (Joe Palooka) Fisher are finding it just too impossible!. . .Mona Rutledge, the pic beauty, and Lewis Luckenbach, steamship heir, will merge shortly. . .His matrimonial shackles were unclamped Wednesday. . .Petite Marilyn Miller has a pair of bruised gams. . .Sheila Barrett, the sad-eyed mimic, enters the hospital today for a tilt with the surgeon's knife. . .Herb Hoover, Norma Shearer, Harry Richman, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley and a B'way col'mist chalked on another year yesty—but celebrated separately. . .In Hollywood, land of the yes-men, pipes E. Bruce, they make "yea" while the sun shines. . .Hostess of the newly opened Peach Orchard, roadhouse nite-club outside of Bridgeport, Ct., is w. k. local lass named Peaches Browning.

Anna (ex-Follies) Karina's divorce thrust at her 3rd husband, Fortune Nelson Burson, was checked by death—the lad was drowned in California last wk. . . . The Health Dept. is snugging the proposed kissing marathon at Luna—germs . . . Famous golfers of history proposed by E. Paul: David, who made a hole in one; Samson, who couldn't break away from the links; Magellan, who went around in 1521; Queen Elizabeth, who was always in the ruff; Daniel Boone, who shot birdies in the American open; Samuel Adams, who staged the Boston Tee Party; Sapphira, Ananias' wife, who tried to improve her husband's lie . . . The Claire Windsor-Charlie Rosenthal twosome is flaming anew . . . Which reminds me, although I've almost taken a vow not to mention his name for a month or so—there will be no more orchids or corsages of any type for the gals who go out with Tommy Manville, Jr., hereafter, thereby ending another of the town's pet institutions . . . Young Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and Jimmy Walker have established an entente cordiale Overthere, making a three-some with Betty Compton.

Dorothy Lee, the filmgal, flies back to the Coast next wk. to wed Marshall Duffield, ex-California grid star . . . Beverly West, Mae West's sister, faw down and broke her arm . . . Odd twist: Just a little over a year ago I announced over the air that June Knight was starting breach-of-promise suit against Jimmy Dunn; following that June became involved in a series of romances, including Max Baer, and now she and Dunn are working together in the film version of "Take a Chance" and going places together . . .

Scheduled to crash the front pages shortly is the exciting breach of promise suit by a gal named Galicia Anido against a leading ork pilot now married . . . Ad agencies are already signing up liquor contracts contingent upon the repeal of the amendment . . . Wini Shaw, the blues-chanter, once a "Follies" principal, is slapping Leo Cummings with a divorce action . . . She's the gal who replaced Ruth Etting for a time . . . B. Grundy describes George Olsen as the fellow with a grand slam in teeth . . . Minor B'way romance: Prudy Edgar, Hollywood restaurant dancer and Leslie Berger, one of the 4 slambanging Climas . . . Gal receiving most publicity during the week is Bruce Fenn, a pretty radio singer, who hadn't received a mention up to a fortnite ago—she's to be featured in Lew Brown's next show . . . Robert Montgomery travels Down Memory Lane here Monday.

Gossip About People You Know

OFF ON CANADIAN TRIP

Mrs. Anna Lane and Mrs. Pasqualina Iorio, of the State Commissioner of Correction's office, will motor to Canada this weekend for their vacation. They plan to visit Montreal, Quebec and St. Anne de Beaupre, with possibly a steamship voyage down the St. Lawrence and up the famed Saguenay rivers.

MODEL HOLD EYE

A model of the Massachusetts State House, as originally designed by Charles Bulfinch is on display in Doric Hall on the first floor of the State House. It is attracting the close attention of out-of-town visitors. It is roped off and guarded and later will be placed in a glass case. Unemployed architects constructed it.

42 YEARS' SERVICE ENDED

Following 42 years' service in the employ of the State, Miss Molly Burgess of Dorchester will voluntarily retire next Wednesday. She is the principal assistant in the head of the archives department at the State House.

Tulip Scrap Quilt

By Laura Wheeler

Have you ever made a scrap quilt—not a crazy quilt, but one made of scraps arranged in a pattern? If you haven't, you have missed one of the most interesting forms of patchwork. It is not alone the most economical quilt to make, but the most fascinating to do.

The diversity of the material to be used, makes each block a new adventure. The Tulip was always a favorite motif in quilts, but when it is done in scraps, it gains in charm. Then like the tulips in our garden, each flower can entrance us with its color variety. The border, too, is made of scraps.

PATTERN NO. 508

Pattern 508 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Pattern pieces and directions for making the scrap border are also given, as well as directions and yardages for making a plain border.

Send 10c for this pattern to Boston Evening American, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth ave., New York City.

40 Cents an Hour Agreed In Trucking

Washington, Aug. 12—Tentative agreement on wages and hours for the trucking code being prepared by a committee of truck owners was ready for presentation to the National Recovery Administration.

Previously it had decided that all trucks should be included in the code that were not operated by business under other codes. The tentative decision calls for a basic pay of 40 cents an hour.

Tells Hatters They Kill Their Own Goose

Newark, N. J., Aug. 12 (AP)—Patrick McGovern, a Hatters' Union delegate, drove home a point on how to revive the hat industry at a union meeting here.

"I watched you fellows come in," he said. "And a lot of you were bareheaded. You ought to know better than that."

One Dead, 2 Hurt In Tiverton Crash

The injured were John Holland and Fred Bennett, both of this city.

Lowell Brakman Is Crushed by Fall

LEGAL NOTICES

IN BOARD OF STREET COMMISSIONERS OF THE CITY OF BOSTON. August 10, 1933.

ORDERED: That due notice be given that this Board is of the opinion that, in said city, public improvements should be made, consisting of:

The laying out and construction of Ragnal Street, Brighton district, as a highway, from Aldie Street to Holton street;

The laying out and construction of Morris Avenue, Brighton district, as a highway, from Market Street to Glenrose Street, with the name of Morrow Street or some other distinctive name;

Substantially as shown on plans in the office of this Board, that it intends to pass orders for making said improvements, and that it appoints 11 o'clock A. M. of August 23, 1933, and the office of this Board, 401 City Hall Annex, as the time and place for public hearings in the matters.

THEODORE A. GLYNN,
JOHN J. O'CALLAGHAN,
Street Commissioners.

A true copy of an order passed by said Board on said day.

Attest:
CORNELIUS A. REARDON, Secretary.

BIDS AND PROPOSALS

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS—Mass. Fed. Aid Project No. NRS 245-A.—Department of Public Works. Notice to Contractors—Sealed proposals for Constructing a Section of State Highway in the Town of Huntington and consisting of about 28113 feet of Bituminous Macadam Surfacing, will be received by the Department of Public Works, at its office, 100 Nashua Street, Boston, Mass., until 12 o'clock noon, of Tuesday, August 22, 1933, and at that place and time will be publicly opened and read. Plans may be seen and forms of specifications and contract may be obtained at the office of said Department. A pamphlet containing the itemized Proposal with Special Provisions may be obtained on receipt of a deposit of $2.00 which amount will be returned if the person taking the pamphlet makes a bid for the work on the form provided in said pamphlet, or returns the pamphlet at or before the time of the opening of the bids. Consideration should be given to the fact that this is a National Recovery Highway Project. The attention of bidders is directed to the Special Provisions covering subletting or assigning the contract and to the use of Domestic Materials. "The name and address of the local registration office of the National Re-employment Service from which employee lists for this contract shall be obtained (as required in Paragraphs I and IV of the Special Provisions) will be supplied later but will be in the general locality of the work. "The minimum wage paid to all skilled labor employed on this contract shall be fifty-five cents ($0.55) per hour. The minimum wage paid to all unskilled labor employed on this contract shall be forty-five cents ($0.45) per hour. No bid will be received unless accompanied by a surety bond accepted and approved by the Department or by a certified check for the amount of $5000, payable to the Department of Public Works. The check or bond must not be included in the sealed envelope with the proposal but must be delivered to the Financial Secretary of the Department who will give a proper voucher for the deposit. The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals, or to accept the proposal deemed best for the Commonwealth. The contract is subject to the approval of the Governor and Council. By FRANK E. LYMAN, Commissioner of Public Works, Boston, Mass., August 12, 1933. au12

The Keyhole on the News

Not Today

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, that "light and ardent youth" was talking to Tom Phelan at the curb in Washington st.

"When I was a boy," said Mr. Fitzgerald, "I give you my word I used to stand on the curb in Hanover street, in the dear old North End, and jump right out to the car tracks. Really, I could. It was about twelve feet, too."

"That was years ago, of course," said Tom.

"No, no," said Tom, "not now!"

Cloth Birds

"The Parson is really a bird of dark plumage with a white neck, and its habitat is New Zealand. You might expect that the bird had been named after the garb of clerics, but it is a regrettable fact that the nickname is the other way about."

* * *

Two Other Fellows

Deputy United States Marshal George W. Murphy recently met a man of the same name who actually resembled him.

"What does the middle initial stand for?" he asked.

"Same as mine," said Mr. Murphy.

Then he learned that, like him, the man had been born at Scituate, that his father's name was the same, too.

"I think," said Mr. Murphy, "that I will grow a beard, just to be certain that I'm not you."

* * *

Comes the Dawn

Brookline's distinction as the only city of 50,000 in this country without a motion picture theater—hut or palace—is about to terminate. Plans are completed to transform the present Unitarian Church at Coolidge Corner into a modern movie house which will be operated independently of any theatrical "chain" and will be somewhat opera hat.

* * *

Speed

Frank Grant, president of the Saturday Evening Club, an organization of 4500 young business and professional men and women, has just returned from a leisurely motor trip to the Pageant of Progress, at Chicago.

"The mid-West was fascinating to me," says Mr. Grant, "never have I known such a consistent and unalterable attitude as is reflected in the pep and speed of the entire Middle West. One gets the impression of people running and laughing. That's the way they go about their ordinary business routine."

* * *

Film Humans

Judge Emile Fuchs is a movie critic of the first film magnitude. He ought to be, for very seldom does he miss a routine of about five movies a week.

"I used to be something of a theatrical fan, but the movies, when good, delight me," says the genial judge. "Casting is the biggest single factor in a good screen play, to my mind. I like folks that look like human beings—not like the handsome superlatively beautiful automatons."

HOMELESS FLEE FIRE IN BOATS

St. John's, N. F., Aug. 12 (AP)—Raging forest fires advanced toward the northern coast today.

Hundreds of small boats carried refugees into Green Bay, when flames closed in on their homes. Early today Burlington and Middle Arm had been abandoned and other villages were threatened. At least 24 buildings have been burned at Burlington.

Royal Canadian mounted police were investigating a report that fires in Hants and Pictou counties were of criminal origin.

NORMAN PLANS MAINE VISIT

Quebec, Aug. 12—Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, arrived here on the liner Duchess of Atholl, accompanied by Mrs. Norman, and left almost immediately for New York.

Replying to questions concerning financial matters, the governor, who broke a long habit by travelling under his own name, said:

"I very much fear I can't stop your questioning. I'll make a bargain and answer you with a question, 'Do you think we are going to have a bad storm?'"

It was reported that Mr. and Mrs. Norman may spend a few days at a Maine summer resort.

Time Getting Short to Enter Fair Contest

More enthusiasm than ever seems to be evinced by the entrants in the "Typical New England Boy and Girl Competition" being sponsored by the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Perhaps it is because the cooler weather of the past several days has encouraged the boys and girls to show more activity even than before.

There are so many "typical" boys and girls whose photographs are being sent in that one pauses to give a bit of sympathy to the judges whose work it will be to select the winners.

Every entry, in order to be eligible, must be in the hands of the Boy and Girl Editor, P. O. Box 1617, Boston, Mass., by midnight, Monday, August 21, at which time the competition closes. Then the judges abandon all idea of sleep for several days and the winners are to be announced in the Boston Sunday Advertiser of Sunday, August 27.

Again may we state emphatically that the fact one's picture is not printed in the papers is not a point against the entrant. Again and again we have been asked if this were true. It is not so. So many photographs are received each day that it is impossible to print more than a very smal percentage of these. And the printing of a picture does not mean that that fortunate youth stands any better chance of winning nor does it indicate any preference or prejudice on the part of the editor. Nor will it in any way influence the final decision. Some manly young chap or beautiful girl whose picture has never appeared is just as likely as not to be chosen.

Remember the grand awards are six all-expense tours to the big World's Fair in Chicago. The boy and girl who are declared winners will be permitted to take the parents of each on the trip, and four days will be spent at the Century of Progress Exposition. Then there are 12 other cash prizes of $100 each.

And all that is necessary to become eligible is to send in your photograph. There is no further effort nor work on your part.

RULES FOR WORLD FAIR TRIP CONTEST

1—Any boy or girl between the ages of 6 and 12, inclusive, is eligible, except that no boy or girl any member of whose family is an employe of the Boston Sunday Advertiser or Boston Evening American, may enter the competition.

2—The competition to select the "Typical New England Boys and Girls" opened July 23, and all entries must be made and photographs submitted before midnight Monday, August 21, at which time the contest closes. Winners will be announced in the Boston Sunday Advertiser of August 27.

3—All photographs submitted must be accompanied by a correct and complete identification. For this purpose it is suggested that the coupons printed each day be used to accompany the photographs.

4—No photograph can be returned. This must be thoroughly understood.

5—All photographs should be addessed to the "Boy and Girl Editor Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American, P. O. Box 1617, Boston, Mass."

6—Children submitting photographs should be careful to give the name of the school which they attend, public, private or parochial; the name of the principal or teacher, grade, name of parents in full and correct street address as well as the name of the city and state in which they live.

7—The judges, whose decision will be final, are Cyrus E. Dallin, internationally known sculptor, Patrick T. Campbell, Superintendent of Public Schools in Boston, and Mrs. Eva Whiting White, social and civic leader.

8—The boy and girl selected by judges as most typical of New England children will, with their parents, be guests of the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American on an eight day tour which includes a visit to the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago, with all expenses for parents and child paid by these newspapers.

9—The 12 children, six boys and six girls, selected by the judges as being next in line, will be awarded $100 each, this cash award being a gift from the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American.

10—There are no votes to be cast, nothing, in short, to do except to mail your photograph as soon as possible, correctly identified, to "Boy and Girl Editor, Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American, P. O. Box 1617, Boston Mass."

11—The Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American reserve the right to make any changes deemed necessary, in their opinion, in any or all of the above rules.

12—Each participant upon sending in a photograph and filling in the Entry Blank automatically thereby agrees to abide by the rules of this competition and to accept as final the decision of the judges.

Typical New England Boy and Girl ENTRY BLANK

We suggest using this entry blank when sending in your picture. The information requested here is important and should accompany your picture whether you use this blank or not. Send your picture to the Boy and Girl Editor, Sunday Advertiser and Boston American, Box 1617 Boston, Mass.

17,000 Years to Pay Debt

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 12 (AP)—Oklahoma will be out of debt in 17,000 years, estimates Ovid Neal of the State Chamber of Commerce, at the rate it has been going the last two ears.

MARY WARD FOR HALL OF FAME

This week's nominee for the Hall of Fame:

She is expected to receive signal honors sooner or later in the form of a federal appointment, but even if this does not happen she is sure to be in the forefront of battles waged by the Democratic party for some time to come.

EVERETT PROBE STILL ON

Private investigators are still at work in Everett securing information to be presented by Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederic A. Crafts to the Middlesex grand jury when that body resumes its probe of alleged graft and corruption in that city.

Crafts, meanwhile, is making a thorough examination of all information thus far presented to the jury, which has already resulted in the indictment of seven men.

Miss Fisk Installed

Clip Coupons and Enjoy Day at Norumbega

Clip the coupons in today's Boston Evening American and enjoy a day's outing at Norumbega Park absolutely free. The coupons admit mothers and their children to the park and also include three big rides, the Merry Go Round, the Caterpillar and the Tumble Bug and an admission to the "Crystal Maze." The coupons must all be exchanged at the main entrance to Norumbega Park between the hours of 11 a. m. and 5:30 p. m.

In addition to the attractions named, Norumbega Park is filled with interesting things. The children who gather Monday as guests of the Boston American will, among other things, see the large Zoo where there are many unusual and interesting animals. It's just like going to the circus and you know what fun that is. In fact it's more fun than a circus for there are so many interesting things to be seen in shady, beautiful Norumbega Park. The use of the Athletic Field may be had for the asking.

And how the mothers will enjoy the day free from care and worry while their children are romping gleefully about the park, being entertained every moment.

Norumbega Park is one of the largest and finest amusement centers in New England and there is so much to be done, so much to be seen that a day is all too short a space of time in which to enjoy all of its attractions. You may bring your lunch or purchase it at reasonable prices in the park. The water is pure and cold.

Better clip the coupons right now before you forget to do so. They are valuable and pay big dividends in health and happiness resultant from a day far away from household cares on the banks of the Charles.

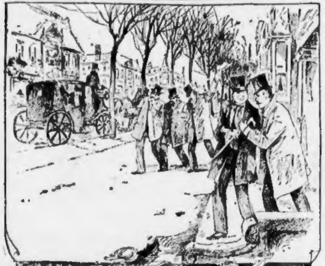
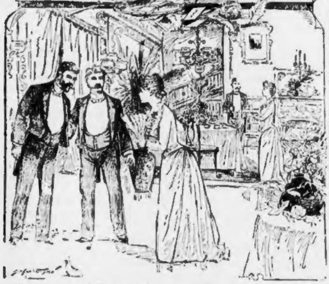
LET THIS BE A LESSON TO YOUSE





Thanks to a little research, we are able to present a powerful picture sermon from the Handbook of Social Forms, Reference and Self-Instruction, published in 1892. The top picture shows "The Old Style Social Call' and what was wrong with it. The lower picture shows 'The New Style Social Call"—with everyone proper and polite. In these critical days, when regulations are being relaxed with a hey-nonney-nonney and a how've you been, there is need for picture sermons like the above. Instead of guests carrying on graceful conversation and placing emphasis on proper behavior, there is too much of the "What-ya-got-besides gin?" sort of atmosphere in what we carelessly call our homes. Eh, Mo?

ROME—Premier Mussolini has instructed all Fascist officials to refrain from wearing silk hats and frock coats during the depression, and, when possible, to ride motorcycles.

It might have kept people's minds off the depression to see Fascist officials wearing silk hats and frock coats when riding motorcycles.

THE HARD WAY

(Hollywood Filmograph)

Ramon Novarro, as the Chinese boy, gave a grand performance. Here is a boy who is really devoted to his art. He had to shave all his glorious black hair off for the part. That's loving art all right, it is quite a sacrifice. The result on the screen is a fine characterization.
